On steamboats, cars and stage coaches, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It deprives vittated, brackish water of its hurtful properties and excerable flavor, counteracts the permicious effects upon the stomach of had or indigestible food, remedies crampe, harburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine defense against malarial disorders, multilines the effects of excessive heat, cold and damp, relieves sick headache, and is an incomparable cure for contiveness and bilionan at The faigue of travel often tells most disastronisty upon invalies and convaluents, occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardise life. Persons in feccile health, apprehensive of bad effects from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

In addition to the main building various wings and additional buildings have been then drunk: erected, until now more than 400 families are lodged in the "Palais Social." Were these in ordinary city tenements they would solidly occupy a street more than a mile long. The buildings are all of brick, and are practically fireproof, and constructed with every possible device for the comfort and sanitation of the cocupants. The buildings are four stories high, and each story has a clear height of ten feet. There is an abundant supply of water in every room. There is also a large courts and attached to such buildings are four stories before, 14 of an ounce; ceffin nails (old ones), 14 an ounce. Boil the whole with 2 quarts of water in every room. There is also a large courtyard attached to each building, paved with cement and roofed with glass, serving as a playground for the children in bad weather. The doors of the buildings are never fastened, and there are no watchmen nor special rules, so that all the occupants are as free to come and go and do as they please, as though each that they open upon a general public hall-way. Indeed the system is very much like that of of one of the huge apartment houses which have become so common in American cities. The cost of the buildings has been about $200 for each inmate, and the rent charged averages about $1 per month for each room. I may add that M. Godin himself had always occupied a set of rooms in the "Palais Social," differing from those of his

The bulk of the business done is the manufacture of stoves, ranges, furnaces, grates and their settings, coal scuttles, and other domestic utensils of cast iron. It is said the finest casting in the world is done there. Perhaps so. I have never seen any finer. The magnitude of the business may be reckoned from the fact that there are usually on hand, in stock, from 30,000 to 40,-000 stoves and cook ranges ready for ship-

M. Godin believes in easy hours of labor. According to his theory, a man ought not to work more than three or four hours at a stretch. So he had them all go to work at 6 in the morning and keep at it till 9. Then there was an hour's intermission for rest and recuperation. From 10 to 1:30 they worked again, and then rested for an hour and a half. Another stretch from 3 to 6:30 finished the day's work. In all, therefore, ten hours' work was done. But by being broken up into three sections it fatigued the men less than eight hours' continued toil would have done. You will understand how low wages are in France when I say that the average pay of these workmen has not been much above $5 a week each, and yet they are better paid than the hands in most other French factories. However, their wages do not represent all their income. From the outset M. Godin established the principle of giving each workman a share in the profits of capital proportionate to his share in the work of producing those profits. The capital of the establishment is $900,000. The annual dividend of profit to the workmen averages about 8 per cent. on this, or $72,000. This pays about $100 a year each to the workmen who live in the Palais Social, for of the 1,200 hands employed some 500 are has succeeded in confirming these nummere outsiders, who live in the village of bers graphically. For the aged and crippled there are vari ous pension and insurance funds. There is a pharmacy fund, by which the sick can procure needed medicines without cost. There is no hospital connected with the establishment, however. M. Godin held that it was best for the sick to be attended to in their own homes. Neither is there any chapel on the premises, nor any religious instruction given in the schools. M. Godin did not believe in religion and did his best to discourage the religious sentiment among his peole, although, of course, he did not positively forbid it, nor in any way attempt to coerce the people to his own way of thinking. As a rule, however, the inhabitants of the Palais

CHINESE PRESCRIPTIONS.

Some of the Horrible Doses the Doctors Mix for Their Patients.

The New York Chinese doctors are beginning to lose their hold upon their heretofore devoted clients. This has of Families Living Under a Single American medical genius. Flapping of a Fly's Wing. The slow flapping of a butterfly's wing produces no sound, writes Sir John Lubbock in his book, but when the move ments are rapid a noise is produced which increases in shrillness with the number of vibrations. Thus the house fly, which produces the sound F, vibrates its wings 21,120 times a minute, or 335 times a second; and the bee, which makes the sound of A, as many as 26,400 times. or 440 times in a second. On the con trary, a tired bee hums on E, and there fore, according to theory, vibrates its wings only 330 times in a second. Marcy bers graphically. He fixed a fly so that the tip of the wing just touched a cylinder which was moved by clockwork. Each stroke of the wing caused a mark, of course very slight, but still quite perceptible, and he thus showed that there were actually 830 strokes in a second. agreeing almost exactly with the number inferred from the note produced .-Boston Herald.

A HANGING POSTPONED.

CHANFRAU'S TWO EFFORTS TO PLAY A PENNSYLVANIA TOWN.

A Big House Prevented by the Failure to Hang a Man as Per Programme-Kit Indulging in a Rage-The Handy and Affable Eural Manager.

Some few years ago I piloted Frank Chanfrau over the Pennsylvania circuit, and as it was my first experience on the "road" I was particularly anxious that the tour should be a success, not only for my immediate benefit, financially, but also for the purpose of creating a reputation with other stellar attractions whom I proposed to take over the same territory later on. I also desired to stand well with the local managers, enabling In Nothing So Much as in Doing Good to me, as it would, to make advantageous arrangements as to terms, etc., etc. APPEASING KIT'S WRATH.

The "country" manager, as a rule, is a peculiar individual, combining, as he often does, the various duties of janitor, bill poster, ticket seller and scene shifter, He is usually a clever fellow, and as his half, and then give him the following star or company, his share of the receipts being quite all profit.

But where he particularly shines and brings his latent talents to the fore, is his readiness to account for a bad house (and he has many of them during the season) with a prompt and reasonable excuse, so that in the event of business being unsatisfactory he may calm down the irate manager and disgusted star, and induce them to again visit the village on some future occasion. The following is a true illustration. We had played all through the coal regions, Kit proving a magnet, and we were piling up the dollars. We continued the tour into the western portion of the state, but on reaching Lockhaven we found that we had met our Waterloo.

I forget now just what our receipts were that night, but it was in the vicinity of $12 or $15.

Chanfrau was simply mad. It was his first visit to that town, and he vowed it would be his last, and, after the performance, when the local manager joined us at the hotel, the genial Frank did not mince his words, and, it is well known, that his curses could be "both loud and deep" on occasions.

What kind of a town is this?" said he; "does anybody live here? Do they ever come to the theatre? Here we bring you a New York success, with a first class company, and we don't play to enough money to pay for hauling the baggage."

"Now, my dear Mr. Chanfran," replied the man of the opera house, "you must know that we have had a show here every night for the past six weeks, and our people are drained of money. Why, "Cellers & Sapman's" company last night didn't take in $5, and Pill's "Goblins" had to leave their trunks for their hotel bills. Ordinarily, this is a first class town, and you can play to big many have been subsequently cured by money. You made a hit to-night, and American physicians when they had will be the talk of the town. Now, if been given up as hopeless by their own you could be here on Friday the house wouldn't be big enough to hold the peo-

"What cyclone is going to occur then?" asked Chanfrau.

"Why, were going to hang a man here next Friday, and all the people will come It may be noted that the one defect of from miles around. You come back and the Riviera is, that it is not green. A play, and I'll give you 90 per cent of the few of our forest trees would make the receipts and haul your baggage free. Chanfrau looked at me and I looked at

Chanfrau, and as he seemed to acquiesce I accepted the proposal, and then and there signed contracts for the return The next day I wired several towns, changed dates, canceled the Friday night where we were originally booked, and, at much trouble and some expense, arranged matters so that we could give the good folks of Lockhaven and vicinity one more opportunity to witness 'The Arkansas Traveler." Friday came and we rode all day, making a long jump, and arrived about 7 o'clock. As it was too late for supper we hurried to the opera house.

One thing struck me at once as being curious, and that was the total absence of people on the streets. Not a man, woman or child was in sight, and the town seemed like a city of the dead, when I had naturally looked forward to a gala night-stores open, citizens promenading up and down the main street and every seat in the house sold before our arrival.

At 8:30 o'clock, and with nobody in the theatre, I mildly suggested to the manager that he had better put out his gas, as we would give no performance and asked him to come with me and explain matters to Mr. Chanfrau. He did so and we proceeded to Frank's dressing room at once.

"What is the matter now? Where is that man you were going to hang today? said my furious star.

"Why, Mr. Chanfrau," replied the local director, "we postponed the hang-ing for another month."—Boston Globe.

What force cannot do ingenuity can. * cleaning and see. * Try it in your next house-A STRUGGLE WITH DIRT Goes on in civilized society from the cradle to the grave. Dirt is degradation-and degradation is destruction. Women, especially, are judged by their habits of household cleanliness, and no stronger condemnation can be expressed than "she keeps a dirty house and a filthy kitchen." But the struggle with dirt is often unequal .) The woman's weakness or the worthlessness of the scape she uses mase it impossible to overcome the demon of die a the use of SAPOLIO she wire easily.
