It has, in name only. One never hears of hasing now; stacks and stacks of pieces of green truthfully deny that "jumping" and "running" have not yet fallen into a decrepit old

Let us first imagine the "plebe" who arrives in September at the Naval academy. He is a green looking chap. Men from all quarters of the country come tumbling into town, in all soris of clothing, and with all sorts of airs. The new man is immediately sent on board the Santee. His first struggle is with his hammock. He doesn't sleep in the hammock the first night. Most of his time is spent in learning how to get into it, and after he gets in, how to stay in.
