

Mabel Murmurings.

October 28, 1891. A. Smith did business in Crawfordville last Saturday.

John Barnard arrived here last Saturday from Prineville. Mrs. Gurty and son visited friends on Mill Creek last Sunday.

Last week John Lewis, Sr., purchased Emma Smith's farm, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres. Consideration, $1,400.

John Lewis went to Oklahoma last July with the intention of making that place his future home, but he had lived too long in Oregon to stay away long, and last week returned to Mohawk to reside amid more familiar scenes.

The Sunday School at this place is moving along very harmoniously. The closing of the last Sunday was simply ridiculous and uncalculated, and instead of uniting the antagonists that exist, it caused some very unpleasant things to be said which would have been better, for the school, unaided. There is two factions of the Sunday School, one favors dropping the organization, going away with the officers and allow the church to have control of and run the school; the other favors keeping up the organization and running it independent and separate from the church.

The former we are happy to say, are in the minority. It is a mystery insoluble, how any sane person or set of persons, (especially those belonging to the church,) can conscientiously say that the Sunday School should be run solely under the supervision of the church, and that it is contrary to the teachings of the bible to run it as a separate organization; yet there is a few persons here who contend that it is. We had no idea that there was anyone in the community who would entertain for a moment such queer and one-sided notions and if they would take the second thought about the matter, it would be plain to be seen that the school could not long survive under the supervision of the church.

It has been tried heretofore and the result was an ignominious failure. We must all unite, lay aside our personal difficulties for "United we stand, divided we fall."

Moisty weather. Grass is growing nicely. Ben Keeney and wife visited friends near Creswell Sunday.

Our debating society is flourishing; meets Friday evenings. The Hampton boys have returned from across the mountains. Charlie Smith and wife of Chrisman are visiting relatives near Goshen.

OUR POET'S DREAM.

A parody on Excelsior. The veiling mist was falling fast, As through an Oregon valley passed A youth who bore, 'mid shower and shine, A banner with the bold ensign— FAIRMOUNT.

His brow was glad; his eye benevolent Flashed like a falcon from its sheath, And like a silver clarion rung The accents of that well-known tongue— FAIRMOUNT.

In happy homes he saw the light Of household fires gleam warm and bright, Above the din of auction sale His voice gave forth the loudest wail— FAIRMOUNT.

"Keep far away," the agents said, "That land is a swamp deep o'er your head, And evermore to sleep you will be laid, But loud that clarion voice replied— FAIRMOUNT.

"O stay," an agent said, "and rest, My land is dry and far the best, I give with every lot a prize." But still he answered with loud cries— FAIRMOUNT.

"Beware the owner's many puffs, The land is rocky hills and bluffs," This was the agent's last goodnight, A voice replied far up the height— FAIRMOUNT.

While every day, at early call, Learned men there came to Villard Hall And taught the wisest things that be, A voice cried through the air with gle— FAIRMOUNT.

An old man by his fireside Is chatting with his aged bride, Still grasping in his hand an aged name that is known around the world— FAIRMOUNT.

One million dollars is the pile That makes the old man's visage smile, This sum, he leaves unto his kin, Was made by buying lots within— FAIRMOUNT.
