Butter.

Numerous specimens of ancient butter are to be seen in the Irish museums, many of them were dug from depths of ten, fifteen and even eighteen feet below the surface of the ground, and considerable antiquity must be allotted to the finds, although no absolute date exists by which the average increase of age could be calculated. Examples of this butter weigh as much as thirty and forty pounds and upward, and are identified by the numerous hairs of reddish color as being the product of the cow.

The butter is found packed in hollow vessels of wood and in masses of irregular form. The latter are usually surrounded with a layer of moss and at times have an additional covering of linen cloth. The object of this burring butter in peat or in bog water is to preserve it from decay and to prevent its becoming rancid.

Chemical examination still demonstrates the presence of those oils acids obtainable from ordinary butter and the absence of common salt. This is characteristic, for in the County Kerry butter is still made without the subsequent addition of salt. The practice has long passed into oblivion and even the tradition is forgotten by the descendants of the race who must in former times have employed it as an ordinary and familiar proceeding.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Russia's Home for Foundlings.

The czar and general government of Russia shelters and provides well for at least one portion of its subjects, and the Russian army will never lack recruits so long as the present system of foundling homes is kept up, as each day many bring additions to this great army, who pass muster in these institutions, where they are tended with the most perfect care, not infrequently by the very mothers of the waifs themselves. These mothers, having no way of providing for their unfortunate children, bring them to the home, secure the number placed around the neck of the child and then apply for the nurse's position, thus securing the child's future, while many bring them here and never see or hear of them again.

The government of Russia greatly encourages these institutions by providing for them in a most substantial and comfortable manner. We visited the home in Moscow, where we saw 1,000 of these little soldiers, none of them less than five years old, in each crib or in the nurse's arms, all in the sunshine, and struggling for a life that had been so ruthlessly thrust upon them. They are brought into the institution at the rate of sixty per day. That number was in waiting in the ante-room to have their names and numbers entered in the book of fate for a home within its walls.—Denver News.

The Two Barney Stones.

Five miles west of the city of Cork, where two streams meet, is the little valley of Barney, with its castle, whose fame is world wide, for high on the northeastern side is set the famous "Barney stone." It is said that he who is adventurous enough to reach it and has faith enough in it to kiss it will henceforth have a gift of marvelous efficacy. Honeyed words will flow from his lips and persuasive powers hang on his utterances. He will win his way everywhere and with every body, and when mankind, and much more womankind, are taken captive by the witchery of his tongue people will say, "He has kissed the Barney stone."

There are two stones, however, each of which are claimed to be the real talisman, the other being on the summit of the castle. The stone last named is about two feet square and bears date of 1704. The one mentioned in the opening as being set in the wall on the northeastern side of the structure, which is 1466. To kiss this the visitor must be on the summit of the castle, the building some twenty feet by means of ropes. This has the effect of making most every one believe, or pretend to believe, that the stone on the roof of the castle is the true "Barney stone."—American Notes and Queries.

Equals.

Every incident should be welcomed which in a country where offending "honor" must be satisfied by questionable means, tends to make the practice of dueling absurd. Many a sensible man has escaped the lifelong remorse attendant on "bringing down his man" by the simple method of throwing cold water on the person's injured sensibilities in the beginning.

One day a distinguished notary, while breakfasting with a friend at a cafe in Paris, indulged in some stinging comments on the public acts of Marshal Marmont. Suddenly another gentleman, dining at a neighboring table, arose and approached them, his mustache bristling with anger.

"Sir," cried he, tragically, "you shall give me satisfaction!"

"Are you Marshal Marmont?" quietly asked the notary.

"I have not that honor," was the reply, "but I am his chief aid-de-camp."

"Give me your card, then, sir," said the notary. "I will send you my head clerk."

—Youth's Companion.

It Was Loaded.

A sad case was that of a friend of mine who went to a gunsmith's to buy a revolver previous to going abroad. The man behind the counter handed him a number of new revolvers to choose from, and my friend kept on trying the pulls, when one of them went off, killing the salesman instantaneously. At the inquest it appeared that the revolver was one of a number that had been sent on approval to a gentleman, and before sending them back he had evidently overlooked a cartridge in one of the chambers, with this dire result.—London Tit-Bits.

Doctors and Lawyers' Mistakes.

While cross examining Dr. Warren, a New York counsel declared that doctors ought to be able to give an opinion of disease without making mistakes. "They make fewer mistakes than lawyers," responded the physician. "That is not so," said the counsel; "but doctor's mistakes are buried six feet underground, a lawyer's are not." "No," replied Warren, "but sometimes hang as many feet above the ground."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Spinsters.

Among our industrious and frugal forefathers it was a maxim that a young woman should never be married until she had spun herself a set of table, bed and bed linen. From this custom all unmarried women were termed spinsters, an appellation they still retain in all our law proceedings.—London Tit-Bits.

Consecrated a Bishop.

Returned Traveler—How do you do, my little dear? Is your father still the rector of this church?

WIND SWEEP HEADS.

A Physician's Scheme for Detecting the Presence of Insanity.

Dr. Peter McCahey, of Philadelphia, has found that by placing a stethoscope to a person's head he can distinctly hear the sound of an air current within, and by the character of the sound can tell whether a person is sane or insane, and he positively asserts that in the cranium of a big headed idiot this wind current can be distinctly heard loudly whistling.

The doctor is convinced that the brain breathes as well as the lungs. For many years he has been investigating air as a mechanical agent in the human body, and about a year ago conceived the novel idea of a rubber tip to the ordinary stethoscope, whereby the instrument can be fitted so exactly to the subject's head that the sound of this brain respiration cannot escape, but will be undeniably heard. That it differs in sane and insane persons the doctor is convinced, and by means of the stethoscope he feels sure that he can distinguish, as a rule, between healthy brain and people and those who are insane or idiots.

The little rubber tip, which is Dr. McCahey's discovery, is a novelty, and its story was unfolded by Dr. McCahey himself.

"My general theory," declared Dr. McCahey, "is that the great mechanical agent employed by all the animate world, animal or vegetable, to permit of growth against the continual resistance of the atmosphere is heated air. Within the interstices of the tissue of the body is air, and this air, becoming heated by the processes of life, expands a greater expansive force than the outer atmosphere, and thereby enables the animal to grow against it. You can squeeze this air out of tomato and pepper under water and see it come up in large bubbles. In the tissue and hollow organs of men this air is used as the direct mechanical function. The explosive force in spitting, coughing and sneezing we know to be air.

"A free supply of air to the brain is just as necessary as a free supply to the lungs, and any interference with this brain respiration will cause serious disturbance of the cerebral functions, even insanity. Insanity may be caused by a tumor or congestive flow, but post mortem almost invariably disclose no resident cause of insanity. That people become insane and are permanently restored and that there is a recurrent insanity points to a functional derangement.

"This disturbed function I claim to be the cerebral respiration. Air taken into the lungs comes to rest on the brain through the minute pores at the base of the skull. The normal circulation of blood through the brain depends upon this normal air current. If from any cause these tiny pores become closed or stopped to an abnormal degree, the current is impeded or destroyed. The air that is shut in becomes overheated and congests the brain."

By means of the doctor's rubber tipped stethoscope wonderful things come to light. In the head of a healthy person two distinct sounds can be heard, coincident with the inhalation and exhalation of air by the lungs. These sounds are practically of the same time in all healthy heads, but are absent or absent in all classes of insane or idiots. The sounds of the heart and voice in these mentally weak and deranged unfortunate are also different from those in sane persons. As these are grades of insanity so there are degrees of sound.

As a rule the noise of the wind current of an insane or idiotic head is more marked, or perceptible than that of a sane organ, and in big headed idiots it whistles loudly. The major portion of insanity is caused by derangement of the cranial wind apparatus. Where it is not due to a tumor, a blow or some kindred direct injury to the brain or its covering, insanity is traceable to this "ill wind," and the rubber tipped stethoscope may yet become the champion insane expert in the world.—Newark Journal.

Greek Stories.

The controversy on "Compulsory Greek" in the universities has received a characteristic contribution from Mr. Labouchere, who says: "Once the late Mr. Peter Rylands hazarded a long Latin quotation in the house of commons, when I, when I said, 'My honorable friend evidently knows dead languages; I will therefore reply to his arguments in Greek—a language, no doubt, familiar to him.' Then I recited about the only line in the 'Iliad' that I knew. No one (Mr. Gladstone was absent) liked to admit that he did not understand my Greek, and consequently accepted the fact that I had replied conclusively to Mr. Rylands' arguments. So much for the knowledge of the dead languages possessed by the members of the august assembly at Westminster.

Mr. Labouchere was about as audacious and unscrupulous as that Welsh preacher who settled down among a congregation in a small town in the western states. A stranger dropping in to the meeting house one Sunday heard this ingenious preacher giving string after string of "the original Greek" of the pure passages bearing on his subject, all in pure and unadorned Welsh. The stranger, being a Welshman, was visibly amused, whereupon the preacher addressed him directly in Welsh, saying, "Don't give me away. They think it's 'Youth's Companion.'"

The Little Threads Not Always Sure.

It is a mistake to suppose that the presence of two threads in paper money is absolute evidence of genuineness, for while it is practically impossible for counterfeiters to get hold of paper with the threads running through it, it is quite common for them to split open paper, insert threads and then join the sections together again. An expert can easily find traces of this process, but it is done so neatly that the average eye is easily deceived. An experienced bank teller can feel the difference between paper which has been split and rejoined, and he can detect a little roughness at the edges. For all that a split note is occasionally passed among others, and a man not accustomed to handling much paper money will take it without question.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Not Hard to Fill.

New Girl—Please, mamma, while you're down town, would you be so kind as to order me a pair of shoes?

Mrs. De Style—I—er—do not know your size.

New Girl—Nor I, mamma; but I think if you get them about the size of your feet they'll do.

Mrs. De Style—You think you want them?

New Girl—Oh, yes, mamma. After new shoes is wet they shrink.—New York Weekly.

When One Club Dines.

At a dinner of the London Thirteen club every visitor was told that they "must conform to the rules of the club, and if requested, must walk under the club ladder, spill salt, cross their knives and forks, shake hands across, wear a peacock's feather, open an umbrella in the dining hall, and do other things deemed unlucky and evil omens."

Carbonic Acid Gas in Liquid Form.

At the Guinness brewery in Dublin an attempt is being made to utilize the carbonic acid gas liberated during the process of fermentation. As some 35,000,000 gallons of this gas are produced annually in the breweries of the United Kingdom, a great saving will be effected if the new enterprise proves a success in a commercial way. The gas is to be condensed into the liquid form, in which form it sells at eight cents per pound. The makers of soda water, mineral waters, wine, "with a pop" and other like drinks will rejoice in the prospect of cheap carbonic acid gas in a convenient form.—New York Telegram.

A MASTER OF MILLIONS.

Here's a Man Who Can Give Jay Gould Pointers.

SHREWDNESS OF AN "APOSTLE."

Now Dr. Cyrus Teed, Chief of the Koreans, Got Control of the Vast Fortune Accumulated by the Economites—Gi-gastile Plans.

EED, Cyrus Teed! That is the name of a man who has accomplished more in one coup than any Rothschild, Gould or Vanderbilt has achieved in a lifetime of shrewd financial scheming. He has got his hands on $150,000,000 of accumulated wealth, and he proposes to put it into circulation.

He plans to establish co-operative stores, to build a six track railway across the United States and in various ways to elude communication and to lessen the cost of life's necessities.

Who is Dr. Cyrus Teed? Well, he is a remarkable man—a man who has founded a celibate society known as the "Koreans," a man who claims to be immortal and who arrogates to himself powers usually associated with divinity alone. He has had a varied career since he was born in a New York village fifty-two years ago—a career that according to common report has been open to criticism.

After separating from his wife, who had just given birth to a boy, Teed branched out (the date being 1850) on a western experience that is without parallel in the history of the world. Buddha never claimed greater purity, Confucius never spoke more authoritatively, Mohammed never laid down the spiritual law with greater earnestness, and Brigham Young never laid such "revelations" as this man Teed. His Chicago College of Life became the center from which the Korean doctrine spread. Branches were established at various points in the United States, the San Francisco colony being the most notable because of the earthly scandal that have of late attracted to it public attention.

TEED'S initial revelation disclosed the fact that the world is hollow, that mankind lives on the inside and that the sun is the center of the globe. As to his personal experiences they are thus recounted by an enthusiastic disciple:

"When he was baptized the Holy Spirit descended on him as a dove, and he heard a voice calling to him. Nobody heard the voice or saw the dove but himself. Subsequently he was caught up into heaven and lived for a time among the angels. Wonderful revelations were made to him. He learned that God became incarnate once in each era of the world's history. God or divinity became incarnate first in Adam, and subsequently in Enosh, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Elijah, Jesus and others. Each meridian covered a period of 2,000 years. Christ came in under the sign of Aries, the Ram or Lamb. After the era of the Lamb came the era of the Fishes. The Christian era has been under the constellation of Aquarius. Christ understood this when he chose fishermen for his disciples. 'Each dispensation overlaps the other.
