peals of San Francisco has reversed the decision of Judge Hauford in the Dis trict Court in the cases of the British tugs Lorne and Pilot, which were fined for towing American vessels in American waters. The defense of the tugs was that as the towing was partly done on the British side of the boundary running through the Straits of Fuca, they came within the exception in the law in favor of tugs towing partly in American and partly in foreign waters. Judge Hanford held that the Straits of Fuca are common to both nations, and that no part of them can be described as foreign waters. The Court of Appeals held that the waters north of the center line of the Straits are foreign waters within towing of American vessels in American waters by foreign tugs. Foreign tugs can claim the benefit of this exception unless it can be shown that the partial towing in foreign waters is done in bad faith was set up. The estimate of revenues of the British government for the current year is $450,000,000. These revenues come chiefly from tariff duties, which prove England's claim to the title of free trade country a misnomer.

Try an Incubator

There are a few farmers who still show an inclination to cling to the old method of hatching eggs and not to adopt the ncubator; but it must be said, writes incubator; that they are generally the ones who do not make the poultry business success. ful. Artificial hatching is one of the greatest inventions for the poulterer ever dozen; celery, 5@9c; squash, 2@3c; grees peas, 7c per pound; cucumbers, 75c per dozen; rhubarb, 5c per pound; radishes, 30c per dozen; tomatoes $2.95 per low. use; but, if they are raised for market, the incubator is indispensable. Artificial-hatching machines are now used all over the country. If it were not for these, it would be doubtful if the great demand for broilers in the early spring could be supplied. The price for the spring chickens would go up so high that very few could afford to live on chicken meat. Near the large cities thousands of chickens are hatched out by these methods on single farms. There is money in it, for in the early spring it is not unusual for the poulterer o get as high as $2 per pair f r his birds. At this rate a flock of from 500 to 1,000 would pay a handsome sum. By use of the incubator two flocks per year can be hatched. One is brought into existence in time to meet the spring trade in young poultry, and the other late in the fail to take advantage of the demand for broilers just before and around the holidays. By such a double arrangement one is kept busy all the time, and a good income is reaped.

Incubators have been greatly improved half-barrels, 44@47c; in cases, 35@80c per gallon; $2.25 per keg. California, in barrels, 40c per gallon; $1.75 per keg.

These beat the old hen plums, 6½c; apples, 5@6½; pears, 8c the incubator will accommodate about er round. fifty times as many as the ben there really seems to be no comparison. The initial expense is not so great. The incubator really costs less than many of the farm implements which farmers need for field crops. A little study and experiment will make one fairly proficient n handling the incubator successfully. A farmer who cannot make the poultry business pay under the old system should try an incubator, and if he does not succeed, there must be some fault with his methods. Now is the time for hatching the spring broilers, and many will reap a big profit in supplying this trade from the incubator-hatched chickens.

Worms in Sweet Corn. The egg that makes the sweet-corn worm is stung into the young tender husk of the corn about the time of silking or grain-forming time by moths or enough about them to guide them in the right time, way and place in which to lay their eggs. These eggs soon hatch out the young worms, which commence to feed on the tender grains at once, and they continue to eat until fully grown, when they drop off (if not disturbed bedown into the ground, where they form ity, $8.00@8.50 per box; for crosses, $2 a chrysalis that will next season produce a butterfly or miller ready for business again. Now these millers never lay eggs on cabbage or melons, but on corn only;

> and these millers should come out in the rye field this spring, they are not going to waste any time in laying eggs on the rye, but are going to travel until they find corn. These egg-laying millers are all migra-tory, and they will find the right place to deposit their eggs before they stop. The reason that some varieties are more nfested with the worms is because they happen to shoot out at the right time for the laving season of the millers. Sometimes our first early corn catches them, and again the first early will miss them

Oats sown as soon as the ground can be worked afford early pasture. Use seed liberally. The hens work for a dust bath every bright day they get out. One ought to be fixed under cover for them.

POINTS ABOUT POULTRY.

Whatever diet the fowls receive, keep them dry. Who ever saw a flock full of song and eggs on a wet, sticky floor! Lettuce is one of the best early greens for supplying shut-in flocks. A small bed in the garden will yield a large amount.

"The eggs broke in the nest" is a bad record for choice settings. Be sure the breeding pens have enough lime containing food to inclose their products in good, hard cases.

The feed makes the egg. Ground oats and corn equal parts, their weight of bran and the mass moistened with skim milk make a solid diet for the production of eggs of high quality. Beets may be safely sown early. A dozen rows in the garden will keep the yarded flock supplied with green food all summer and perhaps furnish a juicy meal for the cows once or twice besides. No vegetable equals the sugar beet for fowls. Begin to thin them early.
