CAVES IN NEW ZEALAND.

Some Very Interesting Facts Contained in an Official Report.

A recent report of the surveyor general of New Zealand contains an account of a visit to the Waitomo caves, in the King Country, in the North Island, a summary of which is given in The London Times. The Waitomo river, a tributary of the Waipa, which passes through these caverns, lies about eighty-five miles south of Auckland, in a straight line. The caves are about ten miles from Otorohanga railway station. The country around is undulating. A quarter of a mile before the caves are reached the Waitomo, about twenty feet in width, is seen emerging from the side of a hill under which it has flowed through limestone caverns of various sizes for about twenty chains. A light canoe can be taken along the river through the caves to within a short distance of the gorges, where further progress is barred by the roof coming down to the water. At the entrance to the cavern the stream is eight feet deep. The natives have never had the courage to enter.

The entrance to the cave is 30 feet wide and 20 feet high, and is in the face of a cliff. It is beautifully arched with numerous moss and lichen covered stalactites. The visitor is taken in a canoe ninety feet from the entrance and landed on a silt covered beach. By the aid of candles, for all is now dark, he finds himself among ponderous stalactites, three feet to six feet thick, reaching from the roof, twenty feet above, to within a foot of the ground. Everywhere and over the extensive and intricate cavern are seen stalactites and stalagmites of immense size in vast numbers, with marvelous beauty of form and color. At one place the dark vault is studded with thousands of glowworms, giving it the appearance of a starlit sky. Passing down the left bank of the stream for 140 feet, over a large deposit left by floods, the stream is crossed by means of a foot bridge. From the entrance to the bridge the cavern averages 50 feet in breadth and from 20 to 30 feet in height. After crossing the bridge a sharp turn to the right is made up a steep incline for a distance of seventy feet to the foot of the ladder, which leads to a narrow passage 4 feet wide and 15 feet high, which is the entrance to the Grand cavern.

Here is the bottom of the "well"—a narrow shaft running to another series of caves above. The well is four feet across and perfectly regular, as if made by human hands, and its sides are beautifully marked with horizontal streaks formed of laminated limestone. In the grand cavern is an immense mound of materials, evidently fallen from the roof. Beyond the roof rises and forms two domes, one 50 feet high. Forty feet up is the entrance to another cavern. Beyond the dome there is a sudden fall, the roof lowering so much that the visitor has to stoop. The length of the grand cavern, at the end of which the stream is again met with, is 250 feet. It varies in width from 15 to 40 feet, and from 20 to 30 feet in height. Up to this point the color is a dull brown and light yellow, but in the upper galleries, thirty feet above, there are alabaster and Parian marblelike scenes of unsurpassed loveliness. Twenty feet above the grand gallery is the organ gallery, so called from the appearance of the great stalagmite mass, 150 feet from its entrance, rising tier upon tier, like the front of an organ with marble pipes. From the grand gallery the main gallery above is reached by a twenty-five foot ladder, and 60 feet along it is the "well." Here it is 12 feet in diameter, with smooth sides of hard limestone, and the sound of moving water is heard below. This is 45 feet above where it was first seen. Fifty feet from the upper wall is a fairy grotto, and through an archway 30 feet in length is the banquet chamber. At the end of this chamber is the white terrace, a stalagmite mass, rising in a series of terraces. From this the upper entrance to the caves is reached, high in a wooded cliff 60 feet above and directly over the lower entrance. The report describes other galleries and caves in the same place, but these are the principal ones.

A Diet of Lean Meat and Water.

Life and health can be sustained indefinitely on a diet of lean meat and water, according to Professor J. W. Good, of the Manitoba Medical college. The servants of the Hudson's Bay company in the Athabasca district and in the Mackenzie river region depend entirely on the natural food supply of the country, some living on meat alone and some solely on fish. Great bodily and mental vigor has been retained on such a diet for periods of twenty or thirty years, with singular freedom from constipation and indisposition of every kind. Scoury has appeared only where salt meat has been provided for winter use.

An Ambition Gratified.

When Joseph Darby, the English jumper, set out to learn jumping he said that if he could beat any man in England he would willingly lay down and die. The day came when he was champion, yet because a man hit him with a brick he raised a row and refused to die and had his assailant sent to prison.—Detroit Free Press.

Slightly Sarcastic.

Professor (who has sent the servant girl after a light, and who was slow in bringing it)—Katie, light travels at the rate of 100,000 miles a second. Where do you go to get that light!—Exchange.

Extremities of Animals.

No animal has more than five toes, digits or claws to each foot or limb. The horse is one toed, the ox two toed, the rhinoceros is three toed, the hippopotamus is four toed and the elephant and hundreds of other animals are five toed.—St. Louis Republic.

CUCKOO FOLK LORE.

Curious Ideas, Beliefs and Facts About the Strange Bird.

He must be a well read man who can exhaust the subject of cuckoo folk lore. No bird is so much noticed by rustic and round to other bird lore has so many curious fancies crystallized. Like the goose, several familiar plants are named from it and when it has once arrived it must eat three meals of cherries, according to the folk lore, before it ceases its song, while—

The first cock o' hay
Frights the cuckoo away.
And then (after St. John's day) he Turns into a hawk. Almost every game-keeper at the present day shoots at cuckoo in consequence of this belief, although he could not well spare them, inasmuch as the cuckoo "sucks little birds' eggs to make her voice clear." In Yorkshire this bird influences agriculture:

When cuckoo calls on the barest horn
Sell your corn and buy your corn.
Wee betide you if you do not turn
The money in your pocket on first hearing the bird! If you have plenty of coins at that time endless good fortune will follow you throughout the year, and any wish within reasonable limits will then be granted. Here is another farmer's proverb, the interpretation of which is self evident:

Cuckoo calls and woodcock bay
Make a farmer run away.
Not only does the cuckoo prognosticate length of life, but what is still more interesting it is able to tell mailmen how many years they will remain unmarried. A pretty Bohemian superstition accounts for the fact of the cuckoo building no nest, but laying her own egg in that of a linnet or hedge sparrow. On the feast of the Annunciation, it seems, old custom prescribed that birds should leave off building their nests; the cuckoo was an exception, and worked as usual. It was therefore cursed and deprived of a husband. Some may be glad to know that they can insure themselves against lunacy the rest of the year by rolling over and over in the grass the first time the cuckoo is heard. Its note is proverbially monotonous, and the Scotch have a saying, "Ye're like the cuckoo, ye hae but one song." Its depositing its egg in a strange nest and leaving it there to be hatched is the origin of Shakespeare's rather forced jokes on its name—"A word of fear, unpleasant to a husband's ear."

In the ancient system of medicine the cuckoo was a bird of much value. The body of a cuckoo, for instance, next the body in a hareskin caused sleep. These are samples of the genius for the marvelous which so dominated men's minds in the Middle ages, and which still remains in out of the way districts. The strange habits of this cuckoo tended to the formation of these myths, and nothing could be too wild or extravagant to father on so curious a bird.

And yet the facts of the cuckoo's life and economy are so curious that no inventive powers are required to heighten the bird's attractiveness. It is supposed that the males considerably outnumber the females, and that the latter do not sing. The cuckoo is a parasitical bird, leaving its eggs to be hatched and its young to be reared by foster parents. Two birds, belonging respectively to North and South America, somewhat akin to our starling (Molothrus peccoris and M. niger) possess analogous habits, and with the cuckoo are the only birds which fasten, as it were, on another bird, upon whose food they live and whose death would involve theirs during the period of infancy.

Another fact has been discovered in regard to this. It is found that the female cuckoo lays her egg, not in the nest which she selects, but on the ground—sometimes close, at other times some little distance from the nest—and then transports it in her bill to the nest where she desires to leave it. Professor Newton remarks that cuckoos have occasionally been shot while thus carrying their eggs, and thinks, with much show of reason, that this custom has probably given rise to the belief that they suck the eggs of other birds; to which we would add the corroborative fact that they are continually mobbed by other birds as if they were mischievous robbers. The egg, as most school boys know, is very variable in color.

When it is hatched the young cuckoo speedily thrusts out its foster parents' eggs, and even any young ones, shouldering them, as it were, on its back, as Jenner (who actually saw the process) describes it, and then throwing them out of the nest with a jerk. Most residents in the country must have noticed the ungainly looking young cuckoo after it has flown from the nest, resting on the lawn or on a tree in a helpless, begging attitude, noisily calling for food, which is always faithfully supplied by its foster mother, even when herself but a little water-wagtail. This contrast between the pair in size and independence is ludicrous and striking. After some time the young cuckoo follows its kind to the south, the old ones always going first.—Cor. St. James Budget.

Rather Embarrassing.
"Know that young lady at the piano, Mr. Blunt?"
"Yes, I am slightly acquainted with her."
"Well, I wish I was."
"Why?"
"I'd cultivate her until I knew her well enough to tell her she can't sing. Her voice reminds me of the cry of a fish hawk. Can't you introduce me?"
"With pleasure. I am her father."

IN FOOTHILL GROVES.

Where Ira G. Hoitt Has Found Retirement.

THE INTERESTING ENTERPRISE HE IS PURSUING.

The Well-Known Educator Gives an Interesting Account of Himself.

Since the expiration of his term of office as State Superintendent of Public Instruction, a little over a year ago, but little has been heard of Ira G. Hoitt who filled that office for four years. An Evening Post reporter who went in quest of him yesterday found him at one of the most charming places of retirement in California. Alighting from the train at the pretty suburban village of San Mateo he was soon speeding over the country road which presented a panorama of luxuriant beauty. Two miles from the town a narrow lane opened in the road. The long graceful curves of this lovely and shaded lane were followed for nearly a mile westward toward the foothills, and at length the open gate of a magnificent private estate was entered. After rounding the top of a little hill, picturesque country seat nestled in a sheltered place at the foot of graceful hills burst on the view. A well-kept orchard, acres of flowers and a neat garden spot were successively passed, and then came a picturesque bridge over the neck of a little lake and under an arch of massive live oaks. The long porch which ended the journey was embowered in roses and palms; flowers and foliage of various kinds charmed the eye at every turn.

This was the country home of the late J. H. Redington who for years lavished wealth on the house and grounds. It was secured last year by Mr. Hoitt who opened there Hoitt's Oak Grove School for boys. The house is elegantly furnished, has a library, billiard room and every facility for the enjoyment of home comfort. Not a sound of exterior human life reaches this romantic retreat—sheltered by hills and by live-oak groves. Here the well-known educator was found, enjoying his life and labor as master of a school in which his own educational ideas could be wholly carried out. In response to a servant's summons, he came from the school-building where recitations were going on and cordially greeted the reporter.

"Yes, we are rather in retirement now," he said, "but we are enjoying the life. We have twenty-five boys now and there are four instructors besides my wife and myself. I find that my health has been better here than for years past, although I have never had any serious trouble since my severe attack of sciatica about six years ago. My physician finally gave me relief, but symptoms of rheumatism continued, appearing especially in my right arm. Many people have been surprised that I did not go to my physician again, but I did not. Some friends suggested that I try Warner's Sickle Cure, and as it was very easy to do I did it. It gave me immediate relief and since then I have used it at every recurrence of rheumatic symptoms. I have not used anything else and it has never failed to give prompt relief. I have a bottle on hand now, and only day before yesterday I bought a bottle for one of our boys who had pains in his back. If I felt at liberty to do so I could mention the names of acquaintances who have used it with great success. One is a man in business in Oakland who tried Warner's Safe Cure for kidney trouble and was cured. As you ask me the question directly I have no hesitation in saying that I regard it as a very valuable remedy, for my own experience has demonstrated that it is."

The reporter thanked Mr. Hoitt for the information he had so candidly and courteously given, and almost regretfully withdrew from the beautiful groves where the eminent educator has found an ideal place for a seat of learning.—San Francisco Evening Post.

ACROSS THE DEEP TO THE FAR WEST.

On steamboats, cars and stage coaches, Hostetter's stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It dispels biliousness, brackish water of its harmful properties and excessive flavor, counteracts the pernicious effects upon the stomach of bad or indigestible food, removes cramps, heartburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine diaphoretic against malarial disorders, nullifies the effects of excessive heat, cold and damps, relieves sick headache, and is an incomparable cure for colic, constipation and biliousness. The bilious traveler often tells most disastrously upon invalids and convalescents occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardize life. Persons in feeble health, apprehensive of bad effects from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

A leading actress says that "a kiss to artistic must be impersonal."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be constitutional, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and cures all catarrhs of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

The wrong way, with Catarrh, is to stop it without curing it. The poisonous, irritating snuffs, strong caustic solutions, "creams," balms and the like may, perhaps, palliate for a time. But they may drive the disease to the lungs. The wrong way is full of danger.

The right way is a proved one. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures, perfectly and permanently, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh. It has proved itself right, thousands of times, when everything else has failed.

And this makes its proprietors willing to prove that it's the right thing for you, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing. If they can't cure your Catarrh, they'll pay you $500 in cash. They mean it. They're certain of their medicine.
