For Royal Baking Powder. The "Royal" is shown by all tests, official, scientific, and practical, stronger, purer, and better in every way than all other Baking Powders. Its superiority is privately acknowledged by other manufacturers, and well known by all dealers.

If some grocers try to sell another baking powder in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit. This of itself is good evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

LOOK with suspicion upon every attempt to palm off upon you any baking powder in place of the "Royal," There is no substitute for the 'Royal"

Backing Down Broadway

It was about 5 o'clock in the after noon, one day this week, the hour when the west side of Broadway is erowded with hurrying, home going backing down Broadway.

He held his course steadily, with perfect composure, very near the center of the walk, slowly making his way, slightly turning his head first to right and then to left, like an oarsman who wishes to be sure all is clear

Some few stopped to watch the unique spectacle; as a rule the living tide against which he was steering, moved on unconcerned. All bestowed a passing remark on the man, generally inaudible to the subject.

It has often been said that it takes but little to bring together a crowd in New York. Certainly the novelty of this man's movements was an excep-

"Is it true," saked a sympathetic friend, "that you met with another ac-

A Dialect That Mystifles the Outer World. Some Terms Translated.

"No use gunning in that quarter, I tell you. If you've been caught short, say nothing about it, unless you want to get the razzle dazzle."

These emphatic remarks were made by one of the young guard of Wall street to an acquaintance at the Hoffman house last evening.

"But it's an off market, anyhow." "Not much it isn't. I've had a point-er, and a couple of days will see things swimming—see if they don't. There won't be a break in P. and O. in a month. But it's going to be quiet. There won't be any twisting about it. It's gilt edge, and the fellows who are in have a clinch on it.

To the uninitiated the dialect of Wall street, of which the language just quoted is a fair example, is one of the marvels of the metropolis.
The panic of 1837, "Black Friday" of 1869 and the great panic of 1873 all contributed heavily to the dialect of the speculative class. After each period of unusual excitement the slang became more pronounced. The greatest contributor of all was the exciting period of the civil war, from which sprung a remarkable list of word coinages that have been a hundred times discussed by the men who were then leaders on change. It is impossible to trace the history of Wall street slang without, in a measure, following the history of the street itself. "A break" in the market-a thing till then unknown - expressed the downward movement where stock had been buoyed up by artificial means; "covering his shorts" described the dilemma of a broker who, on a rising market, bought where he could to pro tect himself on the day of delivery of his contracts. Brokers who have lost standing or credit by unfortunate speculation came to be known as the lame ducks" and "snipes" of the street; they were distinguished from the "lambs," who were verdant out-siders who had taken a "flyer" and lost. "Goslings" were the younger brokers who had not got crippled early in the race. "To gun a stock" was to attempt by every possible means to produce a break in that particular se-"People make me tired." curity. "Kite flying" was a risky sport indulged in by brokers who had outrun their credit and were attempting to negotiate worthless paper, or to borrow on "wildcat" stock.

"Collateral" was an invention of Drew, and signified anything possessing value in Wall street, and which was given in bond for a loan. A "good delivery" meant that the broker at a certain time found himself in are wanted at headquarters." shape to do so at the proper date; a "bad delivery" was just the reverse. "Hypothecating" a stock was to place it in anybody's hands as security for a "Caught long" is where the market drops and a broker is caught with a falling stock; "caught short" describes the fix of one who has sold ahead and finds the market rising so quickly that he cannot settle except at a heavy loss. "A sick market" is when brokers generally hesitate to buy-an outcome of overspeculation. "A swimming market" is just the reverse. "An off market" is where the prices have a downward tendency. To "saddle the market" is to foist a stock upon it which it does not seem willing to take. This is done either by "forcing the quotations"-that is, keeping up the price of a stock, or preventing it from drop-

Myths Concerning Amputation.

The Chinese, perhaps, show the greatest repugnance to the surgical operation of amputation of all the civifized races of man. It is a remarkable fact, however, that all savage and semi-barbaric races exhibit the same dislike to having any member of the body severed. Many of the Sea Isl-and races willingly die before they will undergo an operation which involves the loss of a limb. It does not seem as if the Chinese show their dislike for having members trimmed on account of fear or pain, it being widely known that as religious fanatics they will undergo any amount of physical suffering; it only seems to be a desire to keep the body intact. If a Chinaman does, as has been known in rare cases, submit to the operation, he will not be satisfied unless the limb be preserved and kept so that he can see it and have it buried with him at death. Cases have been known where amputated limbs have been eaten by their owners. St. Louis Repbulic.

What She Feared. "I see," remarked Mr. Fangle, glancing up from the morning paper, "that a Spanish geographer has proved the world to be flat."

A Lecturer Discovers His Danger and Loses His Life-A Terrible Warning to Others.

It is a scene in the lecture-room of a medical college in New Orleans. The professor is lecturing before an intelli-gent class of medical students. He is describing the human body, its defects and the danger by which it is surrounded. In order to illustrate it he has fluids from the human body, which he is subjecting to chemical tests.
"Gentlemen," he said, "I have described to you the appearance of the human fluid in a diseased state; I will now show you how the same fluid appeafs in a healthy state," and he sub-jected his own to the test. As he held it up to the light for a moment, his hand trembled, he caught his breath, he paled and exclaimed: "Gentlemen, I have just made a most horrible discovery; I mysell have Bright's disease of the kidneys.' In less than one year he was dead.

The above dramatic and strictly true incident shows the terrible danger and mysterious nature of this modern disease. which may well be called the demon of the present century. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself upon the system before the victim is aware. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Hundreds of people die daily by what is called heart disease apoplexy, paralysis, spinal complaint, rheumatism, pneumonia and other common diseases, when in reality it is Bright's disease of the kidneys. These are solemn facts, but all the more serious because of their solemnity.

There has never been but one remedy known for the cure of Bright's disease, or even for its relief, and that remedy has become the most popular of any preparation known to the world. It is Warner's Safe Cure. It has taken men, and women, too, who were in the lowest stages and restored them to perfect health and strength. It will invaribly check the first stages of this terrible disease, if taken in time. It is indorsed by physicians, approved by scientists and used by the best people in the land. It is a scientific preparation and owes its popularity wholly to its power. It can be procured of any reliable dealer, but great care should be exercised to secure the genuine and not permit any unscrupulous dealer to sell anything in its A Clever Thief.

This is how the presence of mind and audacity of an Omaha thief saved him from being locked up. A policeman who recog nized him and knew he was "wanted," put who had undertaken to deliver stocks him under arrest, with the words, "You know," replied the thief quickly. "I was arrested last night and was bailed out this morning, you are too slow." "It does look that way," said the crestfallen policeman, as he told the thief he could go. of which permission the thief lost no time in availing himself. Later, to his chagrin. the policeman found that the thief had not been previously arrested.-Philadelphia Ledger
