The Portland Catholic Sentinel says: More than twenty years ago, when it was found that prevention of cholera was easier than cure, a prescription drawn up by the eminent doctors was published in the "Sun," and it took the name of the Sun cholera medicine.

Our contemporary never lent his name to a better article. We have seen it in constant use for nearly two score years, and found it to be the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised.

No one who has this by him, and takes it in time, will ever have the cholera.

We commend it to all our friends. Even when no cholera is anticipated, it is an excellent remedy for ordinary summer complaints, colic, diarrhoea, dysentery, &c.

REGULAR.

Daily Guard, Sept. 20. JUDGE WALTON'S ADDRESS.—The Portland Telegram, in yesterday's issue, says of the address of Judge Walton, of this city, before the supreme lodge, I. O. O. F., at Portland: "When the familiar form of Judge Joshua J. Walton stepped forward to the footlights, the audience smiled with an expression of anticipation that they were about to hear one of the judge's inexhaustible supply of witty eloquent speeches, and they were not disappointed."

A BROKEN ARM.—On Wednesday of last week an accident happened on one of the grades of the Siuslaw road near Wolf creek by which Mrs. Jos. Gates, of Spencer creek precinct had an arm broken. She was on a visit to her parents, who reside on Wolf creek, and met another wagon on a grade. The horses were taken from the wagon in which she was riding and the men attempted to back it down but lost control and it ran off the grade and upset breaking her arm, the bone protruding through the flesh. Her sister and four of her children were in the wagon, and escaped without injury. Dr. Kennedy happened along opportunely and set the arm.

DIED.—A four year old son of Wm. Ables, residing in College Hill Park, died last night of a combination of scarlet fever and diphtheria. The child had been unwell since Friday but only last evening was a physician called in, Dr. McKenney waiting on the case, then the child was dying. About twenty children in that vicinity, so we are informed were exposed and it will be fortunate if no other cases occur.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.—Last Friday morning while Mrs. Archie Richardson was preparing to return to her home on the Siuslaw after a visit to her mother, Mrs. Rauch, in Spencer precinct, the team attached to the wagon became frightened and ran away. Mrs. Richardson jumped falling on her chin, the fall inflicting serious bruises. The under lip was torn from the bone to the point of the chin.

Some one has figured out that the following have been the champion prize fighters in the U. S.: Tom Hyers, Yankee Sullivan, John Morrissey, John C. Hoenan, Joe Cornburn, Bill Davis, Mike McCoole, Tom Allen, Jim Mace, Joe Goss, Paddy Ryan, John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett.

The Mill City Gazette says: "Wm. Sullivan was taken down to Mehama before Justice Askew, Tuesday on a charge of embezzlement, sworn to by Don A. Smith of Gates. The action grew out of the delivery of ties to the railroad company by Sullivan, on his own contract where a bill of sale had been given to secure a mercantile indebtedness subject to work hands' pay on the job, but as the condition was left out of the bill of sale unbeknown to Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Smith takes advantage of it. The lien of the workmen who were employed to get the ties out, naturally came in first. Furthermore, the railroad company did not recognize Smith's claim upon the ties, hence paid the money for them over to Mr. Sullivan, of their own free will. This is Mr. Sullivan's statement of the case. He is, however, held under bonds for his appearance at the fall term of court."

The Portland Welcome tells this story: Chief Spencer sprung an entirely new surprise on the members of the police force Thursday night. He appeared at the police station in faultless evening dress, silk tile, white necktie, gloves and cane, and not an officer recognized him. For all they knew he might have been the grand mogul of the visiting Odd Fellows and was treated as a stranger making a tour of inspection. Even the chief's own sire failed to know his own sire and when the father gave the boy a smart rap on the back the youngster resented the unlooked for familiarity with the remark, "Say, mister, don't you get too fresh." After talking with the boys on duty for a time some one tumbled to the identity of the supposed visitor and the chief had a good laugh at their expense.

The F.M. says: In the calm of a summer day with the first tinge of autumn coloring forest leaves, one sits and cogitates—not on the welfare of nations or a solution of the much-voiced eastern question; but on a graver subject than either of these; and that is, wherewith to clothe the skeleton of the new columns of a daily paper with interesting reading matter—mental pabulum for the omnivorous intellect of the public. The poor overburdened, unfortunate is an editor, and there is a demon standing behind the chair, with disheveled hair, blood-shot eyes, and every feature betokening determination and sternly demanding "copy." You, who have tears prepared to shed them now, for misery never stalks abroad in a more troubling aspect than the manner feebly depicted in these few lines.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge. PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 19.—Cool and cloudy ushered in the opening day of the sixty-eight annual session of the Sovereign Grand lodge of independent order of Odd Fellows. The streets present an animated scene and are handsomely decorated along the line of this afternoon's parade. At 9:30 a. m. a large crowd gathered at Marquam grand opera house where representatives of Sovereign Grand lodge were formally welcomed to the state of Oregon and city of Portland by Governor Pennoyer and Mayor Mason. J. J. Walton welcomed representatives in behalf of Grand lodge and Grand encampment of Oregon. Hon. Charles M. Bushbee made a fitting response at conclusion of the exercises at the opera house, grand representatives escorted by Canton Portland No. 1, marched to Arion hall where the session of the Sovereign Grand lodge was formally opened by Grand Sire Busbee. After reading different reports and referring them to proper committees the lodge adjourned to allow representatives to participate in parade this afternoon.

At 2:30 this afternoon the procession consisting of six divisions, comprising about five thousand men, formed on Sixth and Washington streets. After traversing line of march, they were reviewed by Grand Sire Busbee, the Deputy Grand Sire Campbell, Lieutenant General Underwood and staff Governor Pennoyer and Mayor Mason, after which they disbanded. The streets along the line of march were crowded with spectators. The uniformed cantons gave the whole a fine martial aspect.

USED HIS WIFE'S MONEY.—The Corvallis Times, of the 13th, contains the following: "Fred Root, the scrub who drew out of the bank $275 of his wife's money, about two weeks ago and skipped for parts unknown, leaving his wife and child almost destitute and heartbroken, sought an interview last Friday with the woman he had promised to cherish and protect, and begged her to let him return to her home and affection. He had spent all the money and repented his rash act. The woman refused to have anything to do with him, but notified the officers of his whereabouts. Before the law could get its clutches on him he skipped again but in all likelihood he will soon be snubbed up and made to suffer for his crime." The fellow was taken back to Corvallis Thursday morning having been arrested at Salem while at work for McCoy, the bridge builder.

It may not be amiss to remind our readers that the Hereford bull, Grover Cleveland, took first prize at the Oregon state fair the other day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Twenty-six years ago the loyal organization known as the Grand Army of the Republic was formed with B. F. Stephenson, of Illinois as the first commander. Since then yearly reunions of the men who fought to preserve the Union, met in reunion, but never in this city since the close of the war of the rebellion till today. For days the grizzled comrades have been gathering from every part of the Union until the attendance surpasses anything ever before seen in the history of Washington. All the hotels, tented camps, schoolhouses and a large number of private residences were thrown open to them and are crowded with the men who defended the capitol against invasion in the dark days of fraternal strife. Every available resource has been drawn out, and in spite of the vast throng, everybody has been sheltered, cared for and fed. As the night wore away, and the bustle which characterized the day and evening subsided, the statement, "All quiet on the Potomac" became as true as in the days when some of these patriots slept on the banks of the historic river. Today broke bright and pleasant, and the sun as it mounted in the east gave a genial warmth like that of early autumn or belated summer. It was just the day for going out and enjoying life out of doors. Camps were astir early, and ablutions and breakfast attended to, the visitors were ready to enjoy the day. The decorations of the day are elaborate and tasteful throughout, but along the historic Pennsylvania avenue from the capitol building to Twenty-seventh street, along which the Union army marched with service-worn uniforms and battle scarred flags at the close of the war, they are particularly brilliant. The public buildings received special care in this regard, and the White House and treasury departments are conspicuously beautiful and elaborate. A feature of the day was the inauguration and dedication of Grand Army place, as it is called. It is a magnificent stretch of green sward, lying just south of the White House grounds. On this an arrangement of tents and closing campaign of the war with Richmond in the center, surrounded by groups of tents representing the various army corps which assisted to wind up the war.

After the parade Vice President Morton was escorted to Grand Army place and was received with a salute from the guns of the Kearsarge. He took a place on the stand beside Commander-in-Chief Palmer. Prayer was offered by Chaplain-in-Chief Payne of Florida, and then General Palmer delivered the introductory address. A prominent feature in the grounds is the model of the old war vessel Kearsarge, some portions of the original vessel, such as the rudder post, portholes and deadlatch being from the old vessel itself. The dedication of the Grand Army place was preceded by a parade of members of the regular army and navy, and was of especial interest to the veterans, affording an opportunity to contrast the arms and accouterments now in use with those carried during the late war. The procession consisted of five brigades, including troops of the regular army, naval batteries and marines, the District National Guard, Posts of the department of the Potomac, G. A. R., and Sons of Veterans. The procession marched from Second street up Pennsylvania avenue to the treasury building, where it was reviewed by Vice-President Morton, thence to Grand Army place.

Senator Hill's Speech.

New York, Sept. 19.—There was a great outpouring of democrats in Brooklyn tonight. The Academy of Music could scarcely accommodate the crowd which tried to get in. The principal speaker of the night was Senator David B. Hill, who was greeted with tremendous applause. His speech was listened to attentively on the whole, though broken by frequent bursts of cheering. The interest toward the close of the address was great. The speaker did not once mention the name of Cleveland. In each instance he referred to the ex-president as "he." When after one grand phrase of the deepest meaning he closed with the words "Cleveland and Stevenson," the audience rose en masse and cheered him to the echo, recognizing the ingenious climax to his address. The tariff and the force bill were the themes of the address.
