Paso Robles Springs.

This springs resort, so well and favorably known, lies in a beautiful oak knollled valley between the Santa Lucia and Gaviola mountain ranges in San Luis Obispo county, and is distant from the ocean about twenty-five miles. It is 2100 miles in a southerly direction from San Francisco to El Paso de Robles, the "Pass of the Oaks," and the journey is a more than ordinarily pleasant one, the entire distance being covered by rail.

PERSONAL.

The situation is a little south of the great redwood belt, but the valleys, canons and richly foliaged mountain sides are dotted with sycamore, oak and pine; and the undergrowth, especially along the Salinas river, unusually luxuriant.

PERSONAL.

There seems to be some peculiarity about the soil hereabouts; it seems so clean and dry, without being dusty; it gives one the impression of its being a perfectly airy medium to lie down on this warm, sweet soil and rest indefinitely.

PERSONAL.

This being an all-the-year-round resort it may be proper to remark that in winter the climate is mild and equable, and invalids or pleasure seekers need not be deterred from a visit through fear of inclement weather.

PERSONAL.

Eight hours of easy, comfortable travel by rail, from San Francisco, brings one to Paso de Robles. There is no pleasanter day's ride out of San Francisco than this; twice the ocean is cited, and a glimpse of California's proudest institutions are to be had en route, viz.: Leland Stanford Junior University and the Lick Observatory.

PERSONAL.

The road runs through what may safely be called the Garden Valley of the state, the Santa Clara, and the stranger may see here the finest samples of the fine orchards, vineyards, and other vegetable gardens to be found in California.

PERSONAL.

The Paso Robles Hotel, lately constructed, is three stories high, and has a frontage of 285 feet, with an extreme depth of 240 feet. Semi-circular towers ornament the north and south wings. A striking addition to the external beauty of the structure has been ingeniously embodied in the Salinarium—a large tower rising directly over the center of the building, and from which eye-like elevation the guests can view the beautiful surrounding country.

PERSONAL.

For further particulars regarding this famous resort see L. G. Adair, S. P. K. agent in this city or write to E. P. Rogers, General passenger agent, Portland, Oregon.

PERSONAL.

Through the kindness of Mr. Wm. Obenauer & Co. we have a copy of the new city directory on the table. The work is very complete regarding public information and is beautifully bound. It contains an official directory of Eugene and Lane county as well as the several organizations in the city.
