IN THE SHADOWS.
As the shadows filled the room with peace,
We spoke of our absent friends
How some were dead and some were sped
To the faraway world ends.
And by some magic of yearning hearts
The lost seemed warm and near;
Yes, loved so much we could almost touch
Their hands and feel their hair.

LIFE AND DEATH.
There met one day beside the church porch
Two men, one tall, one like a dwarf.
A mourner led the first, a friend in night,
Her sunlight gone because her arms were light.

How to Enter and Leave a Room.
If there are other guests in the room,
greet each one pleasantly upon entering.
No matter if you cannot recognize them at any other time. Etiquette demands that you treat those guests politely whom you meet in a friend's house. Don't slide into the first chair you reach, but pass well into the room before seating yourself.

THE DEATH OF TOMMY.

Virginia Hospitality Could Not Be Disregarded Too Lightly.
The south has always been known for its hospitality, and nowhere has this quality been more religiously maintained than in Virginia. Unfortunately the war made sad havoc with the Virginian's resources, but his old time open heartedness has never altered.

Some years ago a friend of mine traveling in the lower portion of that state stopped for a few hours with old acquaintances and remained for tea. An occasion of this kind in Virginia calls invariably for the favorite dish of the south—the fried chicken.

Alas! there was but one young chicken on the place, and that one a pet. It had been left an orphan by its mother at a very early age, and, like Pip in Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations," had been brought up by warts. The children called it Tommy, and were very fond of it, while Tommy in turn was attached to the children.

The matter was a very serious one, and a family consultation was held. Virginia hospitality could not be lightly disregarded, and it was decided that my poor Tommy must become the sacrifice.

My friend of course knew nothing of the tragedy that was being enacted for his comfort, and when tea was served regarded the plate of nicely browned chicken with contemptuous joy.

Soon, however, he became aware that something was amiss. An air of silent sorrow pervaded the little family group usually so gay, and the children took nothing on their plates. The chicken was passed, but the exception of my friend, no one partook. Selecting a juicy looking drumstick, he fixed it with his fork, and cutting off a choice bit conveyed it to his mouth.

At this there was a sudden and heart breaking howl from one of the little boys. "Oh, mamma, mamma, he's eating our Tommy!"

Thereupon the other children mingled their voices in a wild wailing, and the older members burst into uncontrollable laughter in which, as the truth dawned upon him, my friend joined.

Then there came explanations, more laughter and tears, and adjustments all around.

Poor Tommy could not be restored to life, but he was buried under a big apple tree with appropriate ceremonies.—Albert B. Paine in Harper's Young People.

A Ball of Fire Makes a Visit.
A very singular story is told concerning the vagaries of one mass of globe lightning. A tailor in the Rue St. Jacques, in the neighborhood of the Val de Grace, was getting his dinner one day during a thunderstorm when he heard a loud clap, and soon the chimney board fell down, and a globe of fire as big as a child's head came out quietly and moved slowly about the room at a small height above the floor. The spectator, in conversation afterward with M. Babinet, of the Academic des Sciences, said it looked like a good sized kitten rolled up into a ball and moving without showing its paws. It was bright and shining, yet he felt no sensation of heat. The globe came near his feet, but by moving them gently aside he avoided the contact.

After trying several excursions in different directions it rose vertically to the height of his head, which he threw back to prevent it touching him. As it steered toward a hole in the chimney above the mantelpiece, and made its way into the flue. Shortly afterward—"when he supposed it had had time to reach the top," the tailor said—there was a dreadful explosion, which destroyed the upper part of the chimney and threw the fragments on to the roofs of some adjoining buildings, which they broke through.—Chambers' Journal.

A Theory About Man's Beard.
There is a theory favored by the disciples of Darwin that the beard is merely the survival of a primitive decoration. Man, according to this view, was originally as hairy as the opossum itself, but as he rolled down the ages he wore the hair off in patches by sleeping on his side and the hair of the dog is not worn off in this way, but a great theory is not to be set aside by an objection so trifling. By and by our ancestors "awoke to the consciousness that they were patchy and spotty," and resolving to "live down" all hair that was not ornamental they with remarkable unanimity seem to have fixed on the eyebrows, the mustache and—unfortunately, as the self scrapers mostly think—the beard as being all that was worth preserving of the primitive covering.—English Illustrated Magazine.

What Fog Means.
Professor Reynolds gives a practical illustration of the effect of fog in connection with some new bellows which had been running for four hours at Owens college during a heavy fog. The bellows, which was new and bright when started, was found, when stopped, to be black and loaded with dirt. It had been running at 4,000 feet an hour. Professor Reynolds points out the resemblance to the dirt on an express train, the phenomenon in both cases being due to the fact that the rapidly moving body comes in contact with a greater quantity of air in a given time than a stationary body, and, therefore, picks up a greater quantity of atmospheric pollution.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Battle Luck.
General Johnston, who managed to outlive his friend, the enemy Sherman, by a few weeks, was wounded in nearly every battle, while Sherman and Sheridan got off with mere scratches. Admiral Nelson owed his fate to his mania for braving danger in every form, but in spite of a similar recklessness Marshal Suwaroff was wounded only twice, and Frederick the Great only once, when a piece of case shot unharmed him in the battle of Torgau—Felix I. Oswald in Philadelphia Times.

A THRILLING NARRATIVE.

The Tale of a Young Navigator Easily Told Than Believed.
There was an acquisition to the select circle at the corner grocery. It was a tall, dark looking individual, with a pair of drooping ears, goblin blue eyes, and a pale, was nose. The crowd immediately sized him up as a man with a history, and he was asked to contribute something for the edification of the present.

His eyes wandered, with a far away expression, over the faces of the men grouped around him, and then he said he would relate an incident that occurred while he was at sea, about fifteen years ago.

"I was born," he began, "at Portsmouth, of rich but honest parents. My father owned a line of steamships, and as I was passionately fond of the water, he would put me in command of a steamer as soon as I was old enough, if I would start at the bottom and learn all there was to be learned about navigation. I gladly accepted his proposition, and at the age of fifteen was installed in the helm as cabin boy. From that position I was promoted, as soon as capable, to the different posts, until at last I reached that of captain.

"Then my father, to my great joy, gave me command of the Sea Hawk, one of the finest vessels in his service. It was a proud day for me when I started on my first trip across the Atlantic. I had made several successful trips, and as the season was about to close it was decided that my next one was to be my last. It was, but hardly in the sense my father meant it. On this passage we had a very small number of passengers, as the weather was quite disagreeable. We got off all right, and had been out about four days when the barometer indicated that we were to have some ugly weather, and it was not mistaken.

"I had seen storms in my life, but never, I think, one equal to that which, about midnight broke upon us with all the unbridled fury of the elements. The waves reached a height that would seem incredible to one who had never been in a storm at sea, and our vessel was tossed about as though it had been a chip. Suddenly there was a vivid flash of lightning; then, above the terrible tumult of the roaring waves, above the shrieks of passengers, came the most soul terrifying clap of thunder I have ever heard, and my vessel was struck.

"In another instant the ship, with a fearful plunge, settled rapidly and sank from view, carrying every soul on board with her. I had been standing near the rail, and when I saw we were about to sink I leaped upon the bulwarks and sprang into the water as far from the vessel as possible to avoid being drawn down with her. I was fortunately successful. How the night passed I know not, but the morning dawned there was not a vestige of either wreck or human beings. I was alone upon the broad bosom of the Atlantic, with not so much as a straw to cling to, and a thousand miles from land."

Here the narrator paused and gazed contemplatively into the sky. He announced with a satisfied smile that the morning dawned there was not a vestige of either wreck or human beings. I was alone upon the broad bosom of the Atlantic, with not so much as a straw to cling to, and a thousand miles from land."

"What did you do?" one of the men asked in awestruck tones.
"Oh," answered the stranger, "I swam ashore."

And, accompanied by his breath, he went forth into the still, chilly night. The crowd in the store was mute for fully ten minutes. Then one of them softly whistled. "And you wink the other eye."—Chicago Figaro.

PREVENTING FUTURE MISERY.

If there is, in this tale of tears, a more prolific source of misery than the rheumatic twinges, we have not to look for it. People are born with a tendency to rheumatism, just as they are with a tendency to consumption or to scrofula, might cause may it follow this. As soon as the rheumatic twinges begin to appear, it is better to take Hood's Sarsaparilla Purifier, which has been found to be the best remedy for this disease. It is a blood purifier, and it is the only medicine that has been found to be the best remedy for this disease. It is a blood purifier, and it is the only medicine that has been found to be the best remedy for this disease.

THINGS WORTH REMEMBERING.
When you feel a kind of goneness about the stomach it is a sign that your food does not sit well, and that you are about to have a fit of indigestion.
When you begin to feel nervous and are unable to sit still comfortably, when your clothes suddenly seem to lose their fit and become too tight in places the fit of indigestion is surely upon you.
If you have this fit of indigestion repeated from day to day it finally resolves itself into dyspepsia.
Remember that three to ten of FRANK'S PILLS will cure the worst case of indigestion or dyspepsia, or both, and that a regular course of them, say two every night for a week or ten days, will act as a preventive of either complaint.

O! the Agony

Of Those who Suffer from Scrofula
Hood's Sarsaparilla Purifier, Soothes, Heals, CURES.

Mr. T. F. Johnson
San Jose, Cal.

"I have for many years been a great sufferer from Scrofula. A breaking out on my arms and legs; they were covered with eruptions and sores, discharging all the time. I tried very many medicines and consulted physicians far and near, but constantly grew worse. I have taken but three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am cured."

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
rills for rheumatism, and has derived so much benefit from it that he declares there is no other medicine on earth. We would not be without it in the house if it costs $20 a bottle.
T. F. JOHNSON, San Jose, Cal. Our Sarsaparilla has cured this fine blood patient in their private practice. There is also the simplest professional and general remedy for the erythema of the skin for malaria, liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, kidney trouble, nervousness and loss of appetite or sleep. After a meeting, whether followed by a cold or not, the Sarsaparilla is useful as a preventive of the initial attack of rheumatism.
