The Decline in Wool.

When the McKinley bill put up the duties on wool with the alleged intention of improving the price, and the real intent to fool the farmer some more, prices responded by a very sharp decline. That decline has been going on ever since.

It is not at all necessary to the tariff reform argument, as the Courier-Journal remarks, to say that eline in prices. It is sufficient for had rates been lowered, and the same decline had occurred, protectionists would have ascribed the decline to the reduction of the tariff. They did this in former years. They argued that Mr. Cleveland's administration caused the decrease of the number of sheep in the country, although no change in wool duties occurred during his term.

Wool is somewhat lower this year than it was last. The Boston Commercial Bulletin calls attention to the fact, and says the deeline was caused by the election of Mr. Cleveland. But the McKinley bill is still in force. The decline this year is but a continuance of what has been going on ever since the McKinley bill was passed. As to the decline last spring the Bulletin said it would have been greater still but for the enactment of the measure. As to the decline this bare statement.

Wool has been going down ever since the wool tariff of 1867 was passed. It was higher then than it has ever been since, Mr. Sherman is on record as saying that the downward course of wool has shown the tendency of protection to cheapen commodities. That is the argument used to the manufac-To the grower, however, different language is used. He is told that the tariff is all that stands between him and ruin, though it has been often demonstrated that the average grower pays a great deal more tax on the woolen goods | the Soth, he uses than the duties on the quantity of wool he produces, even if he got the full benefit of them all, get $50 for the day's work. though it is easy to show that he does not.

This double dealing with the farmer appears to have lost its charm. It is kept up now perhaps simply from the force of habit. The protectionists have still got the Mc-Kinley bill, and they must accept the responsibility for its effects so long as it remains in operation.

BLAND ON FREE SILVER.

St. Louis, June 28.—Congressman R. H. Bland, the great silver advocate, is here. Reviewing the silver situation as affected by the action of the Indian government, he said:

"Heroic measures will be required on the part of this government for the remonstration of silver. Most emphatically I do not think it is a knockout for silver in this country. On the contrary if congress does not adopt some pressure looking to a himstallic stand. measure looking to a bimetallic standard, it will make the battle of the standards, the coming issue in this country. The battle will disrupt the political parties and cause a contest between the commercial centers and ag-ricultural districts of the country. Free coinage of silver is demanded by the laboring classes and this is what the free-silver men will now demand of congress. The demonetization of silver is a conspiracy between bank-ing institutions in England and the eastern portion of the United States and the suspension of silver coinage in India is a part of the conspiracy to bulldoze the congress of the United States to the adoption of a single gold standard. I do not believe they will succeed. If the democratic congress stands true to its pledges, this conspir-acy will not succeed. The low price of silver is due to the fact that this and other governments are discriminating against it and that the money interests in this and other countries have fought it. No important commercial country has recently had a mint for the free exchange of gold and siver. That the United States by free coinage can restore silver to its original value, was practically admitted by the British royal commission of 1888, The procession will form at the Court House on Oak street, at 2:30 a. m; will move north to Sixth street, west to Willamette, south to Teath street, east to Oak, thence north to the park at the Court House.
