THE REFLECTOR SUSPENDS.

The State Officers Will Speak in The Corporation of the Laurean and No Longer Print the College Paper.

stally Guard, May % At a special meeting of the corpora-tion of the Laurean and Eutaxian literary societies, held at the University of Oregon yesterday afternoon, it was voted to suspend the publication of their paper, the Reflector. The busi-ness manager was bustructed to close the accounts of the enterprise and arrange for unexpired subscriptions There are very few of the latter as the paper just entered upon a new volume and the advance payments are not se diterary societies were organ-n 1:76 or 777 and on the the 28th

Acting on this sug-March, 1801, the corporation suggests began the publication of a paper of its own, the Reflector. At first there were many of tactes but the enthusiastic members went down in their pockets generously for the necessary funds to make a safe start. When overdue subscription were not paid the regents were solicited for aid and for the last two years have taken 250 papers at $1 per year. The total subscription list at the time of suspension was about 500. The value of the paper to the University of Oregon cannot be estimated, but it has been one of the principal factors of the University's advancement for the last three years. The corporation elected editor-inchief, corresponding editor and business manager. To extend the benefits of the paper they allowed a place on the staff for an editor from each of the two societies and each college class. Much credit for the good work done by the paper is due to those students who have held the positions of editor-inchief and business manager during the last three years, and also to Prof. Luella C. Carson, of the department of rhetoric, who has kindly given the literary appearance of the paper her careful supervision. The reason for the suspension at this, the most prosperous time in the history of the paper is as follows: The faculty of the University Intely passed rules restricting the number eligible to office in the societies, and other rules office in the societies, and other rules granting eligibility to corporation of-fices to members of all other literary societies whether members of the con poration or not. The editor-in-chief recently resigned and the faculty signified their intention of applying the new rul in the special election for anof Ninth and Oak streets and the two-stery building, the first floor of which consists of three store rooms and the mous a on of yesterday's corporation meeting + the result.
