STATE HIGH SCHOOLS.

Hillsboro Independent: What the Oregonian and its little band of correspondents say about the State University, Agricultural and Normal schools may be true, but if it is, then there is a reason for it. The schools have been starved, and now the parties quoted above want to complete the work they have begun. For this the have two methods. One, cut off appropriations and abandon the work, give up, and float back into the original estate. The other is to scatter the funds still wider, take in a school in each county, preferably a church institution. By this means the death will be quite as certain as the first, only it will be a little slower and more agonizing.

Schools of high grades need money—more than can be obtained by tuition. There is not a school in the world that is successfully operated upon tuition alone. Yale is not. Harvard is not. Cornell is not. Oxford, England, is not. The French schools are not, nor the German. Are we, in Oregon, to undertake an impossibility? Or shall we fold our hands and whine, "I can't."

The great schools of the nations have been and are their glory. To-day men honor rulers as they patronize learning. The Elizabethan age is magnificient because of Spencer, Shakespeare, Bacon. The respect of men will not be bestowed upon the state that neglects the higher mental training. Higher education is absolutely necessary to primary instruction. A trained scholar, though he never enter the district school, has his influence on the rustic.

Monmouth is the best normal school in the state for two or three reasons. It is most centrally located. It has been best supported. It had when it first became a state school, the best facilities. The people of Monmouth made a mistake 12 years ago when they asked state aid for a church school. They admit it now. The school is not connected with any church now. It is a state institution, managed by a board of regents appointed by the governor. What ought to be done is to liberally endow Monmouth by bi-ennial appropriations. The state is not able to keep up Drain, Weston and Lakeview, but t is able to take care of Monmouth and it ought to do it. If the Oregonian and its correspondents are really anxious for the welfare of the common schools, they will demand the training school for the teachers of the district schools. No such thing as an efficient primary school can be had without a trained primary teacher. That teacher may get his "skill to rule" without attending a normal school, but it is cheaper to methodically train him in a technical school.

The agricultural can take care of itself. It has abundance of funds to pay salaries of professors. It will be maintained, but the state ought to provide buildings. Will the state put itself in the position of the great lazy lout, who asked to be driven to his open grave for interment because the corn was not shelled that had been contributed to his sustenance?

Corvallis and Eugene have done much for the two schools located at those two cities in the way of buildings. Does the Oregonian and its correspondents begrudge the pittance required for buildings, when Portland and the lower Columbia have swallowed up so many thousand dollars in harbor improvements, pilot boats and the like? The legislature must be careful and not let that organ cultivate "economy" till it goes to seed. There is something else behind this dust pile, and it may be proper to be on the look-out for the innocent thing.

Ex.: Clerical applicants for free transportation on a western railroad receive the following card, it is said: 'Thou shalt not pass," Numbers xx, 18, "Suffer not a man to pass," Judges iii, 28; "None shall ever pass," Isaiah xxxiv, 10; "This generation shall not pass," Mark xiii, 30; "Though they roar, yet they cannot pass." Jeremiah v, 22; "So they paid their fare and went," Jonah i, 3.

In St. Louis a barkeeper "stole" a kiss from Mrs. Sarah Pierce. She brought suit for the recovery of her property or for damages. She got damages in the sum of $2500. The barkeeper preferred to return her stollen goods, but the woman preferred the money. That's just like a woman!

From a canvass of the United States senate it is discovered that the anti-silver men are in the minority, forty-seven being for free coinage and thirty-nine against it. The expectation is that there will be some free silver legislation at the next session of congress.

Geo. S. Downing, superintendent of the penitentiary, has asked the state to reimburse him $175, expended two years ago in defending himself before the legislative investigation.

FRITTERING TIME AWAY.

The Salem Statesman, one of the leading republican papers in Oregon, has this to say about the legislature now in session. "Day by day the Oregon legislative assembly is frittering its time away in maintaining a senatorial deadlock. Not only this but it is wasting the people's money and appropriating for no purpose whatever valuable time that should be devoted to the enactment of two or three or a dozen good laws and the repeal of many useless ones. Here we are right in the midst of a session of the legislature that was pledged to economy, reform and retrenchment—and what has been accomplished—what are we doing? Absolutely nothing. Aside from the passage of a bill appropriating money for the expenses of the session, practically not a single, solitary law has been enacted. No United States senator has been elected and it looks now as if none would be elected for many days. Not a single useless board or commission has been abolished. Not a solitary recommendation of the governor has been carried out. No employment has been offered for the employment of the state's idle convicts. The assessment laws have not been amended to suit the requirements. But the legislature has done one thing. It has permitted the same old clerkship abuse of previous years and it has placed itself on record as an extravagant body, both as concerns the waste of time and of money. How long is this to last? is the query of a long-suffering and tax-ridden people."

"DON'T SQUEAL, BUT ROOT."

Grocers' Journal of Commerce: The best text for a business sermon that has been presented for many a day is a sentence in the advertising matter of a Minneapolis firm, which reads: "If business is not good, don't squeal but root." It is illustrated by a porker who has quit squealing and gone to rooting, with apparently good success. It is not a flowery, sentimental or elegant text, but, what is more to the point, it is practical and suggestive.

The disposition to squeal instead of root has never been so marked as during the past eighteen months of financial depression. Many men have spent so much force squealing that they have none left for rooting. They have spent their days in grumbling about hard times instead of making an effort to improve them. They have passed the hours in lamentation and let their business dwindle, while their more sensible competitors rooted.

There are many business men who have not only held their own during the hard times, but have really prospered. But they didn't squeal; they rooted. In good times or hard times, those who succeed never squeal. Their time is so fully occupied in rooting that they can spare none of it for squealing. It doesn't matter what business one may be engaged in he will always find a loss in squealing and profit in rooting. In the long list of failures recorded in this country are found the squealers; the rooters haven't time to fail.

If business is not good don't squeal, but root; and if business is good, there is still less reason for squealing and still more cause for rooting.

In matter of petition of Hans Hansen et al for wagon road on Siuslaw river, it being determined by the court that the remonstrance against the same was greater than the petition for it, it was dismissed.

The matter of a bridge across Row river was continued until the May term.

One of the best features of Moorhead's sleeping car bill is the "kibosh" it puts on that tyrannical king of the road, the sleeping car porter. Its enactment will in a short time wipe out the practice of "tipping" which is now so necessary for the travelers comfort and decent treatment.

Feb. 6, 1895.

Mrs. S. D. Cairns is visiting in Eugene this week.

Miss Maggie Parks has gone to Monmouth to keep house for Lester Baughman's children, while he and his wife are in California for the benefit of Mr. Baughman's health.

F. L. Kelley returned to Independence last week. He is proprietor of a livery stable in that town. He reports a good business.

E. Boyd and wife are at Halsey. They went down only for a few days' visit, but they write back that their baby has the typhoid fever, and they will be held there for some time yet.

Miss Dora Blume returned last Monday from a visit of several days to Cottage Grove.

J. F. Blume received the sad intelligence of the death of his nephew at Harrisburg and went down last Sunday to attend the funeral.

Uncle Sam Baughman is now 81 years of age and seems to be as nimble as a man of 60. He is able to cut his own winter's wood, but not because he was not able to cut his own wood, but simply the respect the citizens of the neighborhood have for him, they turned out en masse last Tuesday and cut wood for him the entire day. They put up about 20 or 25 cords for Uncle Sam, and we hope that the citizens may have the privilege of cutting wood for him many more winters.

Last Sunday was a day for a series of accidents. Early in the morning Mr. Blume and wife started for the train. They had not proceeded very far until the horses became unmanageable and broke out the tongue of the carriage. No one was injured. Later a cow was reported fast in a manger in a neighbor's barn. When found she was pretty well used up and could not have survived much longer. However she was extricated and is all right now with the exception of a broken horn. Al Davis was the next victim. Having hitched up an awkward colt, by some means Mr. Davis fell underneath the colt but escaped with only a sprained wrist, and in a short time the colt concluded to rest so laid down on the tongue, breaking it out. Al says it's all from working a colt on Sunday.
