Some People In Eastern Tennessee. It is not generally known that in the mountains of eastern Tennessee there lives a class of peculiar looking people whose origin is wrapped in mystery and who are called by the whites Melungsons. They resent this appellation and proudly declare that they are Portuguese. The legend of their history, which they carefully preserve, is this: A great many years ago these mountains were settled by a society of Portuguese adventurers, men and women, who came from the shore of Virginia that they might be freed from the restraints and drawbacks imposed upon them by any form of government. They made themselves friendly with the Indians, and, freed as they were from every kind of social government, they uprooted all conventional forms of society and lived in a kind of delightful Utopia of their own creation, despising all forms of religion and subsisting upon corn-the only possible product of the soil-and the game of the great forests. They intermixed with the Indians and subsequently with the negroes, and thus formed the present race of Melun

They are tall, straight, well formed peo-ple, of a dark copper color, but with Circassian features. They were privileged voters in the old slave days and accredited citizens. They are brave, but quarrelsome and are hospitable to strangers. They have no preachers among them and are almost without any knowledge of a supreme being. -New York Recorder.

Boyishness In Great Men.

his estimate of the scholarly and formal orator of Massachusetts or not, be was as suredly right in the importance which he gave to the boyish elements in character. "The man of genius is always young." says Bouvier.

"Scott." says the most acute of his crit-"always saw men and places with the vivid insight of a youth. He laughed and wept like a child into his old age. He is a boy to his countrymen still. 'Watty,' they call him affectionately, disregarding all later honors or titles."-Youth's Compan

A LITTLE THING.

"It is a little thing to speak a phrase of mmon comfort which by daily use has almost lost its sense, yet on the ear of him who thinks to die unmourned it will fell ike choicest music." It is a simple thing to suffer ordinary pain; but when it comes by day and night with neuralgia's cruei burt, there's nothing better to cure it than St. Jacobs Oil, which penetrating to every part that aches leases the pain and leaves a perfect cure behind it. It's a little thing to do, but the constort of relief from such distress will make one feel the happier bours of life.

The Ingenious Magpie.

The magpie is nothing if not ingenious. He always barricades his bulky nest with thorn branches, so that to plunder it is by no means an easy matter; but when circumstances oblige the "pie" to build in a low bush or hedge-an absence of lofty trees being a marked feature of some northern localities—he not only interlaces his home, but also the entire bush in a most formidable manner. Nor does he stop here. To "make assurance doubly sure, he fashions a means of exit as well as en trance to the castle, so that if disturbed he can slip out by his back door, as it were. Exchange.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN

The latest news from the Egyptian museum at Gheezeh is that there is such a glut of mummified humanity there, owing to the quantities of priests of Ammon discovered awhile ago in upper Egypt, that the Egyptian government has proposed to the museums of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg and Rome to take them off its hands. They are to be divided into lots, which are to be drawn for by the accepting parties. But at present one and all are somewhat reluctant to take them. So there is still a chance that the poor priests may follow in the wake of the sacred cats, whose mummified remains were shipped to Liverpool as a fertilizer for the fields.-London Tit-Bits.
