Short on Cattle.

Cattle growers of Arizona and Southern California, who have had such a hard time the past few years, are seeing brighter days now and participating in the improvement that has been noticed in other sections of the country of late. The small ranchmen in that section have nearly all gone out of the business and the supply of cattle in Southern California and Arizona is 40 per cent short of a year ago. The result is better prices. The hog demand is taking the reduced crop at fair prices.—Butcher's Advocate.

But appeared the following week stale and uninteresting to any one. If this occurs in the future we shall earnestly seek an investigation of that matter and endeavor to put the blame where it rightfully belongs. [They were misplaced and not discovered until the next week.]—Ed.

REGULAR.

A Fight in a Courtroom.

SEATTLE, May 13.—In Justice Caldwell's court this morning, young Walter Fulton, a nephew of old Bill White the war horse of the Washington democracy, thrashed J. L. Green, a brother attorney, all over the room. The attorneys had been engaged in the trial of a promissory note case, and Green had been on the stand.

The court left the room for a few minutes and Fulton, who is a slight-built fellow of 145 pounds, informed Green, who is taller and about 35 pounds heavier, that his testimony was not according to facts. Green thereupon shook his fist in Fulton's face and called him a liar. Then followed rapid interchange of blows and when the judge came back Fulton had his heavy antagonist's head in chancery, with his body bent over the railing, and was pummeling him in good style. The men were separated and after Green washed the blood from his face, the trial proceeded. Fulton's only injury was to the little finger on the left hand.

Is Found in the Coast Range.
Telegraph: William Mackey, an old Coast Range logger, disagrees with Professor Johnson in the latter's statement that the "weeping spruce" is found only in one spot in the world, to-wit: in the Skagitno mountains. The Corvallis Times says Mr. Mackey has seen the tree more than once in both the Yaquina and Coos bay regions. One of them 100 feet high with long, slender leaf, covered limbs drooping to the ground, he says, is a beautiful sight; so lovely that a lumberman dreads to strike it with an ax. Mr. Mackey adds, however, that the tree is rarely seen.

BARN BURNED.—A barn belonging to J. E. Baker, formerly of Eugene, on his place at Salem, was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Baker's little boy and a playmate set fire to the barn. The loss is about $200.

It is reported that Corbett and Fitzsimmons are to fight and cities are already bidding for the fray.

At Denver experiments are being made with balloons for war purposes, but they are proving a failure. Wars now days are mostly wind, anyhow.

The people up this way who worked to get a fish ladder in the falls at Oregon City, will not be pleased to learn that the work is all undone by straining nets in the river below the falls so it is almost impossible for fish to get over. The law establishing the ladder was not more than half made, or it would prevent this netting of fish.

Journal: A gentleman of this city, who is a married man remarked to a friend a few days ago while under the influence of drink, that a woman was a disgrace to a man. We would be to differ with the gentleman, for it seems to us that the man who gets drunk is a disgrace to his wife, but not having any experience in that line are unable to judge.

Oregon City Enterprise: An advertisement in an exchange reads: "The best grades of ranch butter, 22 cents per brick; creamery butter 10¢ very finest, 40 cents per brick." This displayed advertisement is a silent but strong argument in favor of the establishment of creameries. It is much more profitable for farmers to sell milk to a creamery, and thus dispense with much work and worry in making butter for market under adverse conditions.

Fossil Journal: The editor of the Cottage Grove Echo-Leader got himself into trouble by speaking of a local millinery store kept by a very estimable lady and saying "he was very glad to see her stocking up." When the paper came out, Bro. Thorp was astonished when the lady met him and struck him over his head with her umbrella, at the same time telling him he was a liar and hadn't seen anything of the kind. He doesn't know yet what she was mad at, although he has read the item over a hundred times to see if there was anything spiteful in it.

According to the Rural Northwest Clackamas county has about 500 acres of prune orchards of bearing age; Douglas, 1100; Marion, 3500; Yamhill, 3000; Lang about 400; Benton, 350; Multnomah, 350; Umatilla, 350; Polk, 250; Wasco, 200; Jackson, 200; Washington 150; Union, 100; and Josephine, Columbia, Lincoln, Coos and Curry about 150 acres in the aggregate. There are, in all, over 6000 acres of prune orchards of bearing age in Oregon. There are also several thousand acres of four year-old prune orchards not included above, but which materially add to the total output of fruit. A good crop will this year mean, therefore, an output of 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 pounds of cured prunes in Oregon.

The idea of eating horse flesh is repugnant to the tastes of the American people, but it is likely we will yet be induced, or in some instances even forced, to cultivate a taste for it. The white eye cayuse of the plains, now held in much disfavor in the eyes of lovers of horseflesh in one sense, is to be so prepared that it may be made to satisfy the hunger of these same people, and if not pleasing to the eyes in life, to be pleasing to the stomach in a modified form. We look upon the horse as a course-grained, over-worked animal, but the oxen that has toiled under the yoke is no better. Probably the day will come when efforts of horse-raisers will tend toward the production of succulent horse steak, rather than racers and roadsters, and then we will all prefer horse steak to boarding-house hash.

Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, who was accused of betraying and deserting a young girl in Honolulu, has written to the local papers saying: "If I ever lived a moral, sober, sincere life, I lived it last winter in Honolulu. You see I went there and lived there and left there as a rather sick man had to. As for what I wanted to do, good or bad, read it in this letter from Araba M. Oliver, the girl I am accused of betraying:

"I'm so sorry that that man has told cruel things about you. He is a plumber. He got mad because I gave up the cottage when you left. But you never wronged me. On the contrary, you treated me as your own child and it was a great thing to me to have you live in my humble cottage. As to my being left to charity, you paid me some money when you left, and the bank of California and the bank here will show that you paid me the balance ($70) soon after. The people here have been kind to me, but nobody with $100 is on charity."
