THE MOON'S POWER.

Fallacies about the moon are numerous, such as the moon clears away the clouds; that you should only sow beans or cut down trees in the wane of the moon; that it is a bad sign if she changes on Saturday or Sunday; that two full moons in a month will cause a flood; that to see the old moon in the arms of the new, brings on rain, and many others, of which a catalogue alone would take up a good deal of space. Mr. Flammarion says that "the moon's influence on the weather is negligable. The heat reaching us from the moon would only affect our temperature by a twelve millionths of a degree; and the atmospheric tides caused by the moon would only affect the barometric pressure a few hundredths of an inch-a quantity far less than the changes which are always taking place from other causes." On the whole nature is disposed to agree with the rhyme which thus sums up the subject The moon and weather

May change together, But change of moon Does not change the weather.

Even the halo round the moon has been discredited, for Mr. Lowe found that it was as often followed by fine weather as by rain, and Messrs Marriott and Abercromby found that lunar halo immediately preceeded rain in thirty-four cases out of sixty-one. We always have a lingering hope that some future meterologist will disentangle the overlapping influences, and arrive some day at a definite proof that our satellite after all has something to do with the weather.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, who was recently elected to the house of commons, is on his way from Canada to the British northwest territory to gather information that will be valuable to him in parliament. He will find this territory at this time of year as hard to explore or harder than Central Africa, though somewhat different, and possibly he may change his mind and enjoy the comparative luxury of a trip to the Sound and Portland.
