Mississippi has elected a United States senator who will not take his seat until 1899. Mississippi has a legislature but once in four years.

There are two hundred lawyers, twenty-seven editors and three ministers in congress. The editors have a big responsibility resting upon their shoulders.

Mr. Francis Bellamy, who for nearly six years was one of the editors of The Youth's Companion, has been added to the editorial staff of The Ladies Home Journal as one of Mr. Bok's principle associates. The new editor is a cousin of Edward Bellamy, author of "Looking Backward."

Statesmen: They have been making extensive experiments in road building in Massachusetts, under the supervision of a state highway commission, and one of the conclusions is that they think they can construct a permanent roadway 15 feet wide for $1,200 to $1,800 a mile, though the experimental roads cost nearer $10,000 a mile. Good roads, constructed for heavy wear and to last for hundreds of years will cost a great deal of money. But they will be worth a great deal. The richer portions of the Willamette valley, as we have said so many times before, can now afford to keep up the interest on bonds sold to raise money to construct such roads.

Albany Democrat: A matter that may be discussed scientifically is whether Loyd Montgomery was responsible for the crime in the fullest sense if it is found from a medical standpoint that his brain was sufficiently diseased to effect his conduct. Without leaving the matter to Dr. Grant the Democrat will freely jump where angels fear to tread by remarking that it has not the least doubt of the man's entire responsibility regardless of defect in the brain. The Democrat opines that the brain of the average drinker, for instance, could not be safely compared with that of the hanged man, and that in fact the brains of many people become out of sorts the same as other parts of the body. As the central office of a vast nerve system it would be strange if it did not. And yet we are all individually responsible. The thoughts that come to us this Saturday night are that it would take a pretty dilapidated mind to take away the responsibility, though theoretically it may be materially lessened.

AS IN YOUTH Ayer's Hair Vigor

CORDIALLY INDORSED.

RESTORES Natural Growth OF THE HAIR—WHEN ALL OTHER Dressings FAIL.

"I can cordially indorse Ayer's Hair Vigor, as one of the best preparations for the hair. When I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, all the front part of my head—about half of it—was bald. The use of only two bottles restored a natural growth, which still continues as in my youth. I tried several other dressings but they all failed. Ayer's Hair Vigor is the best."—Mrs. J. C. FRETHER, Converse, Texas.

A NEWSPAPER LIE.—With its account of the hanging of Lloyd Montgomery the Examiner gives a picture of the condemned man in his cell with his attorney. Just before the hanging. The cell instead of a being a steel cage is a regular furnished room with a window with a high, small window to let in a little light. The prisoner and attorney will not be recognized by any one, the attorney looking more like Dr. Parkhurst than either Judge Whitney or Mr. Newport. Of course it was the result of the imagination of a staff writer, who in all probability never set foot on Oregon soil.

MAKING BUTTER.

What the Albany Creamery Has Been Doing, and Wants to Do.

Albany Democrat: The business and prospects of the Albany creamery are gradually increasing, and now it is being run on a solid, reliable basis, in a manner to retain the confidence of the stockholders and patrons. The expenses are certainly minimum for the excellent work done. Mr. Sealey, the manager has proven his efficiency completely. As hatching as the business and the capacity of the creamery is much larger and it is greatly desired to increase the output. The actual workings of the establishment since it began running on May 21, 1895, will be of interest. The plan is this: The stockholders receive 5 per cent in semi-annual payments, the expenses and the patrons are paid for their milk according to quantity and quality. On the 1st and 15th of each month, a small quantity of the milk saved out each time, is tested. It runs from 3.4 to 5.5 per cent of butter fat. The patron is thus allowed according to the amount of milk and the percentage of butter fat in it.

On the 15th of each month every patron is paid for the preceding month ending with the last day of the month. From May 21 to July 1st, over a month, the patrons were paid $401.77, while for December it was increased to $640.55. The smallest amount was paid in September, $379.97 on 2,116 pounds of butter, and the management was somewhat discouraged, even talking of closing down for a few months, but fortunately this was not done, and the business nearly doubled.

From May 21st to January 1st over 2,000 pounds of butter was sold for $4,156.70, of which the patrons received $3,344.19, displaying a very small expense account, in fact about 31 cents per pound if run to the full capacity of the creamery this could be reduced to 14 cents.

The price received by the farmer for his milk is as follows: per position 20c, milk in July, 18c; August, 20c; September, 21c; October 21c; November 22c; December 23c.

It is desired to increase the business as much as possible and any quantity of milk over 25 pounds will be received.

Skimming stations should be started and with the above figures no economy can afford to establish a new creamery instead of a station. Under the system any community starting one and guaranteeing the milk of 100 cows can have their stock consolidated with that of the company. At the regular time the money will be sent by check to the skimming agent and divided among the patrons.

The figures show what a big thing is being done for the dairyman, who receives his pay in cash once a month and knows what can be depended upon, besides receiving a much higher price for his butter.

HE WAS A TRAMP—A few days since a tramp printer came to Eugene and applied at the office of the daily papers, putting up the usual plea of hunger. He was refused as there is not enough work for all the house printers, who are considered far more deserving and are given the preference. The "hobo" called on Brother Anis of the Broadaxe, who is too tender hearted to refuse to give a poor man work. He gave the tramp a job and when he had finished and took his departure, it was discovered by our friend Anis that he had taken all the loose wardrobe and other articles, usually found around a printery, with him. A pasteboard card bearing the inscription, "No tramps allowed here," may now be seen posted on the outer doors of the domicile of the Broadaxe.

Three Hamlets in the city at one and the same time is a dramatic contumacy to rejoice the heart of a member of the Shakespeare club. Just how fortunate it may prove for the managers of these several Hamlets is another story altogether. The fact remains that they are here and it will be an opportunity for comparison, not to be neglected by any Shakespearean student, however humble I shall certainly see and compare, to my own satisfaction, at least.

Walker Whiteside opens first at the new Schiller theatre. It is said that his Hamlet is the best in character. Then there is Otto Skinner, a young and aspiring tragedian, who is to play at the Grand Opera House. Last but by no means least, comes Creston Clark, nephew of Booth, and very like him, it is said, in his interpretation of the melancholy Prince of Denmark.

The three successful plays of the year are Hamlet, The Prisoner of Zenda, and For Fair Virginia. Of the first of these the least said is the better; of the Prisoner of Zenda, as Sothen plays it, one cannot say too much in praise. It is a beautiful and clean play with not a dull moment from first to last, and leaves a delightful impression that stays by one for days.

It is not often that an actor has the chance to star successfully in a production of his own, as Russ Whytal does in his For Fair Virginia. We saw Mr. Whytal at the Schiller last week, and enjoyed Mrs. Whytal's Virginia more than anything else about the play. Mrs. Whytal is not only a charming actress but a most beautiful and womanly woman as well. The scene of the stirring events depicted in the play is in Virginia and the time is the civil war to the fall of Richmond. It is not a great production, perhaps; but it is full of healthy interest and unlike the Prisoner of Zenda, ends happily for all but the villain, who receives in the last act and at the last moment, his well-deserved reward; though to a sympathetic observer it would seem that he is rather severely punished all along.

What a sadly and hopelessly unromantic place Chicago is. A great rude, smoke-begrimed city without a single romantic spot, unless indeed it be the Newberry Library, where John Vance Cheney, poet and critic, rules in a dignified fashion over a host of polite subordinates. Mr. Cheney is one of the few Western men who write constantly for the New York magazines. Formerly a resident of San Francisco, he for several years had charge of the Art Institute library in that city. To him, while there, I must confess gratitude for many kindnesses, and it was a most pleasant surprise to find him here and at the head of an institution whose privileges I am, by reason of the nature of my present work compelled to avail myself of frequently.

The Newberry is purely a reference library and as such is all that one could desire. The rules are strict and somewhat exacting, it is true; but no trouble is counted too great on the part of the attendants to secure the comfort and convenience of students. Children are not allowed upstairs; but by reason of the kindly indulgence of the librarian one little girl is becoming a familiar figure in the historical room. There is a splendid edifice down on Michigan Avenue now being built that is to house the Chicago library. It stands in the vicinity of the Art Institute and overlooks the lake, and will probably, when finished, be much larger than the present Newberry; though I must claim for the latter that it is all one would wish, both as to architecture and location.

When one comes to think about it, there are several attractive things in Chicago. There is the Temple for one, and the Art Institute, and—well I retract what I said just now; Chicago, aside from its absolute uncleanliness, its smoke laden atmosphere and its deadly water supply is a very habitable place.
