

A REPUBLICAN OPINION.

We take the following editorial from the Salem Daily Journal, a republican paper:

"The Kentucky legislature has adjourned without electing a senator to succeed Blackburn. After a long struggle in which death and disease, corruption and the worst political passions played a hand, the battle ends in defeating law and order and Blackburn's seat will be vacant."

"The men who stood for Blackburn made a heroic fight. They can go home with clear consciences as democrats, having stood for principle, for the people, for a man of character and convictions."

"The people on the outside look upon it as a battle between the silver democrats and a republican minority alleged to be for sound money. That republican minority was willing in part to elect Mr. Carlisle, Cleveland's secretary of treasury, a gold bug cu-koo. What the result of that would have been no one can forecast, but few doubt it would have meant the rendition of national politics in two camps on the money question. Now the Kentucky battle is transferred back to the people."

"The politicians and the people of the nation were intent upon Kentucky. All the money of Wall street was ready to be poured out to encompass the election of a Wall street senator. A man's vote to do that, would have been worth $100,000 and he could have got it. But thanks to the honor of men in old Kentucky, that traitor could not be found. The corporations were likewise interested. A senator just before a presidential year means influence to control courts and congress."

"The battle is all over the United States between organized capital and corporations in politics, and the disorganized people. What is the goal of ambition with the bosses in Oregon? To defeat Mitchell because he is not a docile tool of Wall street. What do the Portland bosses want? Offices? Yes; but far more. They want power to compel the appointment of federal judges. Having that power they can bleed the corporations and capitalists of the United States for unlimited corruption funds, and become millionaires themselves."

DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH.

What would you do with your share if all the money in the United States was divided equally? How would you spend it if you suddenly found yourself with the same financial resources as the members of the Gould and Vanderbilt families?

Few persons have any idea how much a pro rata division of all the money in the country would yield to each one of us, man, woman or child. It is a very simple problem in division, but it would require some tall Yankee guessing to give the correct answer off-hand. Some would say $5,000, some $4,000 and some $100. All would be far wrong.

The fact was ascertained from a recent statement issued by the secretary of the treasury, in response to a resolution adopted by the senate, that if all the money in this big land was whacked up—that is, all the money in the United States treasury, and in the banks, and trust companies, and private safes, and money drawers, and stockings, and old stores—only about $30 for each individual would be forthcoming.

A Sunday Journal reporter put the question to a number of people who claim to be up to date, and their estimates of the sum they would receive ranged from $1,000 to $10,000. The total amount of money in the United States on January 1, 1896, according to the statement of the secretary of the treasury, was $2,197,000,336, the population was about 70,530,000.

"I am a farmer and a democrat," observed Mr. Allen of Nebraska, his political attitude and the condition of his hair and whiskers giving some indications that he might be a populist. To this Senator David B. Hill retorted: "If you are no better farmer than you are a democrat, I am sorry for the crops of Nebraska." It was Mr. Allen's turn to come in but he passed. There are no senators anxious to break lances with the brilliant New Yorker, who is by long odds the best off-hand debater in the U S Senate.

The following is a sample of the manner in which the Salem Statesman is going for Hermann, who in previous years the paper has so lustily shouted for: "A distinguished physician says that whenever a person tells the same story over and over again he is on the road to lunacy. That is what ails Mr. Hermann. He has written so many frank letters and telegrams claiming to have 'secured' or to be about to 'secure' everything of benefit that is granted to Oregonians in Washington. It is simply a mania with him. The distinguished physician knew what he was talking about."

TWO NOTED OREGONIANS.

The Dallas T-M: "The fight that is being waged against the Southern Pacific company both in California and Washington, D. C., is bringing into more than usual prominence two Oregonians, who are acquiring national reputation, one as an attorney the other as a cartoon artist. We refer to Wm. F. Herrin, chief attorney for the Southern Pacific company, and Homer Davenport, the S. F. Examiner's cartoonist. Mr. Herrin, as chief counsel for the company, is exerting his wonderful legal and oratorical ability presenting the company's case before the U. S. district court in San Francisco and refuting the charges brought by the California railroad commission, while Mr. Davenport, on the other hand is placing the Southern Pacific in as ludicrous a light as possible, wielding his unrelenting brush. Both the gentlemen are Oregon born and bred. Mr. Herrin is a native of Southern Oregon, and received his education at the Agricultural college at Corvallis, where he displayed much ability as an orator, and soon after having been admitted to practice law entered the employ of the Southern Pacific, and for a number of years has been chief legal advisor of that company. He is a brother of D. C. Herrin, a photographer of the Dallas. Mr. Davenport was born and raised in Marion county. He is a son of Hon. Tim Davenport, of Salem, and a cousin of R. G. Davenport, of this city."

Portland Oregonian: "It will be the fault of the sound money republicans of Kentucky if that state shall be represented by a free-silver democrat for the next five years. They had it in their power to elect Carlisle by combining with the democrats of the same faith. Now that the legislature has adjourned, the Blackburn men are going home to make a fierce free-silver campaign for the next legislature. As the power of federal patronage will no longer be available, the campaign may succeed." This is the sentiment of the gold-buzz organ of Wall street, which is opposing John H. Mitchell's re-election as U. S. senator. If the people of Kentucky are in favor of free silver they should have it, without interference from Wall street or the administration. Senator Blackburn is a patriot, as is the noble band of men who supported him.

Dexter Items.

March 18, 1896. Gardening is the order of the day. Rev. Miller, of Unity, preached at the Dexter school house Tuesday evening. Essex Bowen, the ferryman, visited the city Monday. Mr. Howard ran the boat during his absence. Ross Mathews finished a successful term of school at this place Friday. He will teach on Mohawk this spring. Mrs. Griffith was called to Mohawk Saturday to attend the bedside of her brother, J. M. Spores, who is dangerously ill. A. M. Ridgway intends starting today with his family for Coos county to make his future residence there. James M. Griffith starts today for Comstock on a business visit. Miss Carrie Hyland, of Lowell, visited relatives at this place Sunday on her return from a visit at Elkton, Douglas county. Miss Maude Holbrook, of Egypt, is visiting at E. R. Parker's this week. All our boys had better keep your eyes on Charley. He evidently means business. Democratic primaries at the school house Saturday. All democrats should attend. Jesse Hansbury who has been stopping at John Guiley's during the past year, has returned to his home on Mohawk. Wesley Neet of this place was married to Miss Erma Veitch, of Fall Creek last Sunday by Rev. Miller. He will move on his place at once. School commenced at Upper Lest Valley Monday, with Miss Carrie Bridges as teacher. D. M. Holbrook made a protracted business visit to Eugene Monday. Perhaps he stopped at Pleasant Hill on the trip. At the annual election of Sunday Schools officers was held last Sunday as follows: Superintendent, E. R. Parker; assistant, Mrs. Julia Chandler; secretary, Loren Scrivner; assistant, Mrs. Scrivner; treasurer, Mrs. Martha Guiley; organist and chorister, Grace Hunsaker; librarian, Eiden Tempie nan.

For a year or more past this neighborhood has been bothered more or less with some party committing sneak thieving and pilferings, such as borrowing potatoes, wire off of fences, etc., and last week J. R. Carter's house was entered and 40 pounds of bacon, all he had, was taken. A day of retribution will surely come. No doubt all may remember the circumstance of the man being found dead on the military road near Silver Lake last summer. Until recently nothing was known as to whom was the perpetrator of the deed, but developments have been made that point to the guilt of a certain party. Arrests will be made soon.

HEARTS AT ODDS.

These are extracts from his letters which tell the whole story: "Nov. 9, 1894. 'You cannot know what a shock it was to me to be told that you were ill this afternoon. I cannot fail to connect it with our long walk yesterday, and I am engaged with myself for the future, allowing you to tire yourself out, and on such a bleak day too. You must know by this time that your health and your happiness are things which I value more highly than anything else. * * * I am hoping that the violets will speak cheerfully to you and will make me pensive with you, so that when I come tomorrow you will not rebuke me for my carelessness.' "Nov. 11, 1894. 'My love, you cannot know—no woman can know—what it means when a shining goddess like you puts out her hand and lifts one unworthy of her to her side. How happy you have made me! No matter what may happen to me in the future, no matter what pain, what agony of disappointment, I shall never be the most blindest man, for the noblest, the sweetest and the highest lady on the earth has said that she loved me. * * * My heart throbbed with stars; the air rushes by in music. I feel close to all who have lived and loved, brother to all men who have worshiped women as I worship you, my star, my queen, my love!'" "Dec. 1, 1894. 'I am quite selfish enough, Louise, to loathe the thought of the winter with you away, and yet I am glad that you are going. I am glad that my lady will see the Parthenon, where goddesses—not one so perfect as yourself—were wont to be worshipped; glad that you will watch sunsets and star rises over the Mediterranean. But—ugh—think of this gray New England town and the factory every day. Never shall another winter find us apart, my dearest!'" "Feb. 1, 1895. 'Louise, my darling, I do not wish to be exacting, but I know how beautiful you are, how charming and how unconscious of your charms. Therefore I beg you to beware of seeing too much of that young Englishman. Do not misunderstand me. Believe that I know you the very heart of truth and constancy. But even Englishmen are human, and for his sake I beg you not to give him a chance to fall in love with you.'" "Feb. 28, 1895. 'As to the matter of that Englishman, you totally misunderstood me, Louise. I am not jealous. Have you not said that you love me, and shall I ever doubt anything that you say? Dearest, do not let us misunderstand each other. It is because I would not have another man look longly upon the perfect jewel which is mine—not because I fear that he could steal it—that I beg you to have nothing to do with him. As for what you say about Anita, that is of course absurd. She is visiting my sister, and I am forced to be polite to her. Forgive me, dearest, but that suggestion about her was so unlike you—so unworthy of you and your love. Do not torment my loneliness with such jeers.'" "March 26, 1895. 'MY DEAR LOUISE—You charge me overmuch with jealousy. You force me to think that I have reason for it. I insist, as your future husband, that your acquaintance with Lionel Sewell, ever his name is, shall at once become a purely formal one. * * * Forgive my trade, my darling, but you do not know the agony of mind I endure thinking of you off pleasing with a gay, handsome, fascinating man, while I plod here at home.'" "April 17, 1895. 'DEAR LOUISE—Your letter requesting an immediate dropping of my acquaintance with Anita Fleming is absurd and insulting. She is my sister's guest and will be during all the winter. I shall do what I can for her entertainment. I have told you that I love you. I have asked you to marry me. You have no right to doubt my devotion and loyalty. If your letter was meant as a retaliatory step because of my attitude toward the Englishman, I think it extremely bad taste. * * * Now, dearest, let us have done with folly.'" "May 12, 1895. 'There is but one interpretation to put upon your refusal to comply with my very natural wish. You do not care to oblige me. You do not love me. * * * Miss Fleming is of course still with my sister. Your attitude toward her is perfectly unreasonable. If you find that your alleged love for me has passed * * * Louise, I cannot write! Come home and let us be married.'" "June 4, 1895. 'So you think that my attitude 'has been one of insulting and unwarranted jealousy? That I have assumed a dictatorship to which you are unwilling to submit? Permit me to say that your own attitude has seemed to me quite as unreasonable; that I regard you as displaying an illogical and thoroughly feminine jealousy. I dare say you never loved me. I dare say that I was simply one of the victims in your collection of victims. Of course since you wish your freedom there is nothing for me to do but to grant it. I hope that you may never suffer from fickleness and falsity as I am suffering now.'" "July 1, 1895. 'The package received. Please acknowledge the receipt of your letters and gifts, which I forwarded last week, as soon as possible.'—New York World.

LONGEVITY. As a factor in longevity the London Speaker calls attention to the fact that those people who have been accustomed to the continued disciplinary use of their brains daily, and who have thus placed their nerve power under a highly developed condition of constitutional training, are enabled by these very means to escape the so-called early decay, and to avoid those alarming accidents to health from which so many apparently healthy men succumb. People who use their brains and observe ordinary hygienic care of their bodies resist disease in the first place, and when they are attacked by it they bring their lives or recuperate sooner than do those who have lived less intellectual lives. Thus there is given a new force to the assertion that you may kill a man with anxiety with work. Whether the brain can actually give power to the muscles is not certain, though the enormous strength sometimes developed in a lady who looks very much like it. That it can materially affect vitality is quite certain and has been acknowledged by the experienced in all ages.

Lanza Winfrey, John McClane and Roy Wilcox spent Sunday at Mr. Hebert's. Miss Daisy Gray is visiting at Springfield this week. Mrs. Pengra is staying with Mrs. Walker. Mr. Castleman, the widower, was out sleigh riding and buying oats last week. Wm. Pengra has returned to Springfield after a few days' visit at Mrs. Walker's. Talk of war is strong. Boys, don't fight.

The second day of the month was school meeting. All those present were Mrs. McClane, Mr. Gray, Walter Hammer, Chas. Hebert and James Melick.

Aunt Susan Lowell has her fencing nearly completed. Chas. McClane has been losing some of his cattle. Willie Hebert is visiting Earl Walker. James Melick talks of going east of the mountains. James Sanford is going below in a few days.

Creswell Casualties.

March 19, 1896. Miss Lillie Scott went to the county seat Wednesday. Frank Wilson is down from Rowe River putting in some grain. Chas. Mittan leaves this morning for Sherman county to herd sheep for Vess Kelsay. Mr. Rhodes and family moved to their prune ranch near Cloverdale this week. S. A. Hulin, of Harrisburg, has moved his stock of drugs, stationery, etc., to this place and has fitted up a neat drug store in the Scarborough building. This is an enterprise long needed in this place. Judge Miller has a first-class meat market about completed next door to Robinson's perging awl studio. The squire will dispense law and steaks after the most approved style, being proficient in both callings. James Law, of Bachelor's Hall, while buying himself with his cooking Monday evening, stooped down near the stove and in some way overturned a vessel full of hot apple butter which struck him on the head, burning him severely.

Last Saturday in Spokane a citizen there set a good example. W. R. Mann a prominent insurance man, was awakened early in the morning by a burglar in his room. He drew a revolver from beneath his bed and fired at the intruder. The robber jumped out of the window, ran about 100 yards and fell dead. Mann says he fired but once, but the robber is perforated by two bullet wounds, either of which would prove fatal. One is through the breast, the other in the head. The theory is that when the robber fell he sent a bullet through his head from his own revolver.
