ONE VOTE AGAINST IT

CONFEDERATE DISABILITY BILL PASSED THE HOUSE.

Boutelle's Single-Handed Fight—An Echo of War Talk Raised by the President's Recent Message—Graceful Toward the Vanquished.

Washington, March 26.—Senator Hill's bill to remove the restrictions against the appointment, as officers of the army or navy, of persons who held commissions in the regular army or navy before the rebellion, and who subsequently took part in the war on the side of the Confederacy, which passed the senate during the height of the excitement over the Venezuela boundary question, passed the house today, after two hours' debate, with but one dissenting vote, that of Boutelle. The Democrats, except Cummings, who spoke as he said, "as one of 800,000 Northern Democrats who fought in the Union," and Wilson, who was drawn into the debate by Boutelle, refrained entirely from participating.

Hull, chairman of the military committee, who had charge of the bill, admitted it would subvert no practical purpose, and was largely sentimental. Boutelle, who led the opposition single-handed, thought it would furnish a bad object lesson for naval and military candidates who were about entering on careers in the service of their country, and when he got warmed up to his subject, called attention to the fact that many Southern men in congress in the past had obstructed legislation in the interest of Union soldiers, dwelling particularly upon the opposition to the retirement of General Grant. Grover and Grow, however, supported the bill ardently as a graceful act toward the vanquished, and when the vote was taken, Boutelle alone voted against it.

Senator Peffer today introduced a bill providing for an amendment to the interstate commerce law so as to authorize the interstate commerce commission to proceed summarily by petition through the courts against any railroad company which may refuse to obey any requirements of the commission regarding rates or charges of agricultural products and other freights, and requiring the courts to give the precedence to such cases over others on their dockets.

Nevertheless, there is one voice that appeals to them all. Since I came to England, I have never found occasion to change my tone. There is nothing I would say at home that I would not say here, and there is nothing I would say here that I would not say at home. I do not expect unanimity. When the time shall come that a man shall not dare to speak the thoughts that swell within him for the public good, God help the country."
