BLOWS FROM THE SHOULDER.

Wm. J. Bryan in his speech at the Kansas City depot, July 16:

"I believe, and that belief touches every fiber of my being, that until we restore silver to its equal place by the side of gold; to the place that it occupied for so many years, so many centuries and so many ages, there can be no lasting prosperity brought back to the homes of those who toil. They tell us that they want confidence restored. We reply that confidence must have a substantial basis upon which to rest, and that so long as you legislate value out of property, there is nothing substantial upon which confidence can rest. If they tell us they want an honest dollar, we tell them that we vie with them in our desire for an honest dollar, but when we attempt to define an honest dollar, we beg them to give us a dollar which is as kind to the man who produces wealth as to the man who holds fixed investments; a dollar that smiles upon a man who owes a debt just as much as it does upon a man who holds a mortgage."

"I am not treading in new paths or trespassing upon dangerous ground when I tell you that a dollar that rises in value is a dangerous dollar; a dollar which reaps where it does not sow; gives to its possessor an unearned increment which is taken out of the sweat and blood of those who toil, and if a man who owns a dollar desires that sort of a dollar he forgets the equities of the case. There is no reason why the producers of wealth should bow down and worship a dollar destroying them and their chances of existence."

Spanish authorities at Havana keep sending out accounts of victories achieved by Spanish troops. Yet from the best information obtainable they are confined to Havana and a few other seaport towns.

An official report of the terrible disaster, resulting from a tidal wave, in a Japanese island has been made. It is estimated that at least 30,000 lives were lost and twice that number rendered destitute, and are in a starving condition.

Mr. Henry Clews, Wall street banker, desires Mr. Bryan defeated. This was to be expected. Wall street bankers get their profits from favorable legislation. Mr. Bryan's candidacy does not signify the old order of things is to be continued, hence the Wall street bankers and money changers are against him.

The populist convention is at its teeth and nail at St. Louis today. The middle-of-the-road men are disorganized and cannot agree among themselves upon any definite policy, while the Bryan forces have a splendid organization and are working for a straight endorsement without provisos or conditions. From present indications Bryan will receive the populist nomination.

Some of the gold standard advocates are resorting to the ancient Chinese methods of warfare, and are already throwing the stinkpots. We care not if they call us revolutionists, populists, anarchists or any other name so long as we have a safe reliable candidate and a clean out platform in which things are called by their proper names without equivocation. The contest is one of principle and invective and abuse will have little weight with the voter.

This is a year of splits and bolts in national conventions. First the prohibition convention split on the silver question and two tickets are in the field. Then the republican silver forces bolted the convention and are supporting the democratic nominee. The democrats could not escape the infection and the gold forces refused to vote on the nomination, while some of them, principally administration men, announces their hostility to the democratic nominee, and favor putting up another candidate, or voting for the republican nominee. The populists at St. Louis are hopelessly divided and it is probable will nominate two tickets; one the democratic standard bearer, and the other a straight out populist. The silver convention is the only exception. It will be solid for Bryan and Sewall.

Gold standard papers like the Oregonian are doing the country incalculable injury by their continual prophecies of dire financial disaster should the silver cause prevail. Their continual clamor cannot but have a considerable influence and cause a lack of confidence that prevents people from investing and making improvements. Of course everyone knows their only object is to scare weak-kneed voters, but that does not prevent the harm that results from their rantings. They are false prophets. It was only about three years ago that the Oregonian was pursuing similar tactics regarding the repeal of the Sherman act. It had column after column of stuff urging repeal and prophesying the revival of prosperity that would follow. The act was repealed and matters got worse instead of better. The people will not be scared by the diatribes and dismal forebodings of a subsidized gold press, and are determined that Wall street influence shall no longer control the financial policy of this great nation.

A Hot Weather Tale.

The East Oregonian places the blame for the following upon one Chas. Williams:

"It was a piglet's tail which needed scratching that caused considerable merriment to those who were fortunate to witness the pigstrophe. Place, Pasco, where second only to the Yuma desert, old Sol concentrates his heat at a ratio of 16 to 1 (16 degrees of heat to 1 inch of sand), a number of piglets were sporting in a pond, adjacent to the railroad track. One of them desiring to scratch himself in the locality of his caudal appendage, attempted to do so in the water, but was unsuccessful. Thinking, perhaps he could better perform the operation on the railroad, he forthwith proceeded to do so. Upon arriving on the top of the grade, the water still dripping from his body, he placed the end of him which needed scratching on one of those over heated rails, when lo, steam began to arise, the piglet to jump and squeal and turn his head to find where the mistake had been made. The witnesses state that the affair was ludicrous in the extreme, and that last seen of the piglet he was still sizzling. They forgot for the moment to keep their eyes on Pasco."

A Creswell Casualty.

Wallace's tile factory caught fire yesterday about noon and was entirely destroyed in a few minutes. Wm. Fice, who lives nearest the sheds, was the first to see the fire and with the help of others who soon came, the loose machinery and fixtures were nearly all saved. The tile machine is not injured and the brick machine is also saved but the brick moulds were all burned together with two wheelbarrows. About 10,000 unburned tile in the shed are ruined, and the burning of the shed caused one end of the tile-kill to fall away, exposing the hot tile to the air, which cracked many of them. They had just finished burning the 12,000 tile in the kiln and had closed the kiln, sealing it up with mortar, and all hands had left the place for a short time, when by some means the roof caught fire and in a few minutes the whole 140-foot shed was ablaze.

The windmill which they had only lately put up was destroyed. They will procure brick moulds and go to work at once making brick and as soon as a kiln of brick is up they will go to work to rebuild the tile sheds. A movement is on foot to raise money and materials by subscription to rebuild the sheds immediately after harvest.

Drowned Near Lebanon.

Monday's Albany Democrat: "Jos Kibler, a son of Mr. Ed Kibler, residing this side of Lebanon, near the Santiam, was in bathing yesterday opposite the Moist farm, when he got caught in a whirlpool, strangled and went down. His companions, who were with him, made every effort possible to rescue him, but without success. His body was recovered and the funeral services took place today. The deceased was a young man about 20 years of age and has a good many friends who will mourn his death."

All the young men are reported to have been poor swimmers. Kibler was afraid of the water and his companions are said to have jokingly dragged him into the river, which is twenty or thirty feet deep only a few feet from the shore. He struggled and they were unable to help him out."

NEW GHOST MILL—Coburg is to have a grist mill. A gentleman who completed arrangements to remove it to that city. The mill will be located on a lot adjoining Goodale's saw mill, and it is said that it will not enter the millers' combine. The mill will not be completed in time for this year's crop.

FROM NEW YORK.—Salem Statesman.

Wm. J. Bryan's hope dealers in the East write that New York state will probably not produce over 60,000 bales this year, and they advise Pacific coast growers to care for their yards and not tie themselves up in contracts, and they assert that there will be plenty of picking money here next harvest.

W. J. Bryan's answer to the eastern gold standard men in his speech before the Chicago convention:

"When you come before us and tell us that we shall disturb our business interests, we reply that you have disturbed our business interests by your course, have made it too limited in its application, that the business man who is employed for wages is as much a business man as his employer. The attorney in a country town is as much a business man as the lawyer in the great metropolis. The merchant at a cross-roads is as much a business man as the merchant of New York. The farmer who goes forth in the morning and toils all day, begins in the spring and toils all summer, and by the application of brain and muscle to the natural resources of the country, creates wealth, is as much a business man as the man who goes upon the Board of Trade and bets upon the price of grain. The miners who go a thousand feet into the earth or climb two thousand feet up the cliffs, that bring forth from their hiding places the precious metals to be poured into the channels of trade are as much business men as the financial magnates who, in a back room, corner the money of the world."
