LEGISLATIVE EXPENSE.

Salem Journal: We trust it shall not be amiss to call attention to the amount of money it takes to keep the records of the legislature in Oregon. The legislature has not increased in numbers or length of sessions.

We find that the senate in 1876 and 1878 employed only two clerks, S. C. Simpson and J. W. Baker, costing $650 for each session. In 1895 the senate desk clerks cost $1,455 for one session.

Here are the expenses for clerks and employes (not committee clerks and mileage) for

LEGISLATURE 1885.

Senate employes	$2,781 00
House	2,837 00
Senate record clerks	1,455 50
House record clerks	1,513 00

Contrast with ten years ago, $600 to $700 for each house! Each house now employs five or six clerks on the records and pays most of them $10 a day.

The political necessity for employing a large number of persons about a legislature is now seemingly so great that it cost more to REVISE and CORRECT the journals of the legislature in 1895 than it did to keep those journals in 1876 and 1878. We are making progress down hill.

The Monmouth correspondent of the Independence Enterprise, says that the business men of that city have agreed to sell no more cigarettes to boys.

Mayor Pennoyer, of Portland, has presented one-half of his salary to the city board of charities. His salary is $5,000 per year. Pennoyer is a man that sympathizes at all times with the poor, and therefore is deservedly popular.

The populists and democrats of Harney county evidently mean business. They held a joint meeting of the two central committees a few days ago, and are arranging a union of forces for the next state campaign.

In the settlement which the receiver of the National Bank of Pendleton is authorized to make with Hamilton & Rourke, the partners in the firm named pay 100 cents on the dollar upon every note for which they are directly responsible to the bank.

A New York writer gives the following description of a costume worn by Mrs. William C. Whitney at the opera: "The waist seemed to be literally covered with diamonds and emeralds. A tiara of diamonds and emeralds rested on her coiffure. About her neck was a solid band of diamonds, from which were suspended pendants of diamonds, falling over her shoulders. In the center of the corsage was a diamond star; on either side were other diamond clusters, and suspended from the right shoulder and falling down over the waist was a single string of diamonds of immense size. I don't remember if she wore anything else or not."

Philadelphia Ledger: What is to be done with the vagrants? Shutting them up for the winter in warm jails is exactly what most of them desire, and is a reward rather than a punishment for their offense; while any proposition to set them at work and thus not only recoup the expenses of maintaining them but to make them useful members of society, is sternly opposed by the labor organizations. The depression of labor is making tramps of men who, at the start, would work if they could, but who soon grow fond of living without work, and thus the problem becomes more pressing every day, while no practicable schemes for solving it are being offered.

Some of the wealthiest women in New York's most exclusive society have not devoted all their time to the study and practice of social graces. They have made the opportunity to acquire knowledge of practical things—things that would enable them to earn an independent livelihood if their wealth should by some unfortuitous happening be swept away. There are many New York society women who could demand and receive good salaries for their talents and ability in various professions and lines of trade. Several society women have already gone into trade, and have been successful as milliners, dress makers, caterers, florists and decorators. Others to whom gaunt necessity is unknown, could do equally well.

RIGHT KIND OF TALK.

At the New England dinner held in the city of New York last week, ex-Minister Phelps was the principal speaker. In the course of his remarks he made use of the following patriotic words and expressions of sentiment to which every patriotic man in the nation will say, amen! Here are the words:

"It seems to me that for a while we have got to suspend the contest of party. We have got to postpone the decision of such issue. There have got to be concessions on all sides and self-denial on all sides. If we do that we may look for prosperity. If we do not I should be glad to be informed, because I am sorry to say that I am unable to see from what quarter it is to come.

"We have got to have the patriotism of the forefathers resurrected; a patriotism that is above party and above self; a patriotism that exists when none were for the party and all were for the state. If this government is as Lincoln said it—a government of the people, for the people and by the people—then it is absolutely certain that it cannot be a government of the politicians, by the politicians, and for the politicians, because no two systems of government are more directly opposed than those."

SHERIDAN'S BEST SPEECH.

"The last time General Phil Sheridan was in Milwaukee," said Bob Howard, the newspaper man, "was when the Army of the Cumberland held its annual reunion here in 1882. A banquet was given the association at the National Home. General Sheridan presided. In his opening speech he was puzzled for words, but after a fashion he managed to stammer out something that but few heard and less understood. I was reporting the event for the Sentinel and had taken down everthing Sheridan said just as he spoke it. When he got through he came to me and said: 'Look here, Mr Reporter, do you want to please me?'

"'Deed I do; general.'

"'Then please don't print that d—— slush of mine. Just make up a nice little speech for me.'"

Howard made up a dainty little speech for the commander of the American army, which greatly pleased him.

A few years later, when he was on duty at Washington, Howard's duties frequently took him to head quarters and he always met a hearty welcome. The first time he called Sheridan said: "Oh yes, I remember you. Yor are the man who made that nice little speech for me in Milwaukee."

On several occasions he introduced Howard to his friends as the author of the best speech he ever made.

Colonel Griffith J Griffith, a business man of Los Angeles, has given to his beloved city a portion of the Los Feliz rancho, comprising 2000 acres, for a public park. This the largest public park in the world—barring none—is to be connected with Elysian park by a broad boulevard, something over a mile in length. Water rights go with the land, and the entire gift is today worth about $300,000. This leads the Redlands Citrograph to suggest the query. "What will it be worth to the people of Los Angeles ten years hence?" Col. Griffith makes but one stipulation as a "rider" to his gift, and that is that no railroad shall run to this park, chartered by the city, on which a greater fare than five cents shall be charged.

By the witnesses to the presentation, resolutions of admiration were passed regarding John Heathman, familiarly known as "Missouri John," in recognition of his having eaten 1107 sandwiches and drunk 2130 glasses of beer during the year.

Chicago Chronicle: Some people have queer ideas of humor. Ex-Congressman Cutler of New Jersey was operated upon by physicians for what they thought was appendicitis. They carved and cut and dug and delved into Mr Cutler's anatomy, but discovered that he did not have appendicitis for the very good reason that he did not have any appendix, index, preface, footnote, addendum, erratum or table of contents. They picked up their tools and left in disgust, followed by the satirical laughter of Mr Cutler. He considers this the best joke on the medical fraternity he ever heard of, and he can scarcely repeat it for laughing.

That Horrid Bicycle.

Much is being said through the press and on the streets against the riding of bicycles on the sidewalks of our city. But few persons stop to consider the great advantages derived from the daily use of the wheel. Many regard the bicycle as a luxury, the use of the same a menace to public safety and look upon the rider as a quasi criminal. They forget the untold value of the wheel to the physician, messenger boy, students, mail carriers and day laborers. They forget that in fact nine-tenths of our citizens receive benefits every day either directly or indirectly through this medium of speedy travel.

It is true that accidents occasionally occur, but do they not more frequently happen while riding on horseback, in buggies, wagons, on trains or in a score of other ways? Practically speaking, the only danger in the use of the wheel lies in a careless or thoughtless rider. From such a person the public ought to be, and must be protected.

Our municipal laws grant to the wheelmen during the daytime the use of th south side of all streets running east and west, and the east side of all streets running north and south, Willamette street excepted. Why is this? No benefit is derived from the prohibition of riding on the north and west sides respectively: it does not insure greater protection or safety to any one; is of great annoyance to the business or professional man and is constantly and necessarily violated. The ordinance forbidding riding on any sidewalk at night, as well as the one regulating speed, is habitually violated. Now what is the remedy?

We do not wish to stand in an imperious light before our city law makers, but from a knowledge of the operation of bicycle ordinances in many cities of this and other states we venture to suggest the following ideas which would give propar protection to all:

First—Abolish the ordinance prohibiting riding on the north and west sidewalks respectively.

Second—Enforce the present law forbidding riding on Willamette street and amend this so as to include on Eighth and Ninth street one block in each direction from Willamette street, for these are prominent business thoroughfares, especially Ninth street.

Third—Abolish the night ordinance and require every wheel to be equipped with a bicycle lamp at night and an alarm bell at all hours. Thus supplied, no rider using judgment would scarcely meet with an accident.

Fourth—When accidents, due to the carelessness of the rider, occur impose punishment for criminal carelessness to the fullest extent of the law.

Fifth—See that a strict enforcement of every bicycle ordinance is maintained.

The foregoing suggestions may seem quite ideal but not practical. However, after repeated experiments several of our flourishing cities have now found them to be the best possible protection to all. This is of vital importance to every citizen in Eugene, including nearly two hundred bicycle owners, and as the present ordinances now in vogue fail to accomplish the purpose for which they were created we humbly ask the city council to carefully consider these suggestions and act as nearly in accordance with as possible.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

James Elgin, of Corvallis, Missing —Suspicion of Foul Play.

Special to the Guard.

CORVALLIS, Or., Jan 2.

James Elgin, a Corvallis liverymam, mysteriously disappeared early this morning. His team appeared at the barn, while the buggy was found near, standing on the river bank. Tracks and marks on the river bank show that he fell in the Willamette river. He had apparently wandered in a dazed condition for two or three hours on River street. There is some suspicion of foul play. The river is being dragged. The body has not been recovered.

Sudden Death.

Daily Guard, January 2.

Last evening at 6 o'clock, Mrs Caroline H Roney died without warning at the residence of her son, Mr L. N. Roney, in this city. She was 83 years, 5 months and 11 days of age. For several days she had been feeling better than usual, and had eaten a hearty supper just prior to her demise.

She was born in Philadelphia, Penn. July 20, 1813. She moved to Ohio in 1834, thence to Missouri in 1870, and thence to Oregon with her husband, who died at Dexter, this county, in 1886, in the year 1878. Since the death of her husband she has resided continuously with her son, Mr. L. N. Roney, in this city. She leaves seven sons and two daughters and many relatives and friends to mourn her death. Three sons and one daughter reside in Indiana and two sons and one daughter in Missouri, while Mr A. L. Roney and Mr. L. N. Roney, her other two sons, are residents of Goshen and Eugene respectively. For years she had been a devoted member of the Baptist church.

Funeral will be held at the family residence in this city, Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock; interment in the Pleasant Hill cemetery in the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

COMPLIMENTARY.—Relative to a news item which appeared in the GUARD recently noting the purchase of a second-hand shoe by Currie & Huston, the Burns Times-Herald says of one of the young men: "Mr Robt. Huston is well known in Burns, having lived for several years in this county. He was for some time in the employ of the mercantile house of N Brown, and proved himself worthy the regard and confidence of his employer and the respect of the community. We always believed that "Bobs" would succeed, and if industry, energy and correct habits win, his success is assured."

The state of Oregon is situated on the Pacific coast and has a pleasant climate to live in. It is neither too cold or too warm, and thus is suited for pleasant homes, which can be had in our inland cities and villages; and along our clear water brooks and rivers, and along our mountain spurrs and foot hills.

These places can be vastly improved by turning their surroundings into tame pastures, which can be made both beautiful and profitable.

This can be done by pasturing sheep and goats on it. They will eat off the wild grass, weeds and shrubbery, and their droppings will enrichen the land and prepare it for tame grasses, such as timothy, blue grass and other tame grasses.

Nothing enriches the land so completely as the droppings of these animals.

It will also prepare the land for prune orchards, and that without the expense of plowing or harrowing the ground.

The next legislature should pass a law against the dog nuisance, for they are the only enemies the sheep and goats have near towns and villages.

The law should compel every dog owner to keep up his dog feom sunset till sunrise, or be compelled to pay a fine of from five to ten dollars for each offense. To be collected before any justice of the peace, or recorder in the county.

The fine when so collected, to be paid over to the complaining witness, and thus encourage the enforcement of the law.

This paper is drawn up for the purpose of calling the attention of our law makers to the within subject of the dog nuisance.

REGULAR.

Injunction Dissolved.

Tuesday's Albany Democrat: "Judge Burnett, of the Circuit Court, last evening handed in his decision in the wheat case of Moore, Ferguson & Co., against W F Crosby et al, dissolving the injunction restraining the removal of the wheat. The decision establishes the fact that the wheat did not belong to the defendant Crosby and the plaintiffs will have to take some other course in their claim against him. Upon securing the temporary injunction Moore, Ferguson & Co. gave bonds to the O C & E for $3000 and moved the wheat to San Francisco, further complicating the matter. H C Watson, and Blackburn, Somers & Duncan appeared for the plaintiff in the case, Weatherford & Wyatt for W. F. Crosby, and Geo. W. Wright, for the Albany Farmers Co. The decision probably settles the matter so far as this wheat is concerned."

Changed His Mind.

When reading in last evening's GUARD of the great haste a newly married Jasperite was making to be freed from the bonds of matrimony, an old pioneer is reminded of a circumstance that occurred here in Oregon in the early '50s. At that time divorces were procured through an act of the legislature. Then, as now, "marriage was a failure" with some at least. A farmer applied to the member of his district to secure for him a divorce, but just previous to the bill being presented the following letter was sent to the member:

"Long Tom, Lane Co. Oregon Territory, Jan. 19, 1853.

Dear Sir: My old woman's come home and I find her all right, and I don't want nary divorce.

PAID COSTS.—John Rowe, rear street car driver in this city, yesterday paid $8.50 costs into Justice Wheeler's office. Brown threatened A B Rowe and rather than stand a trial paid the costs and yesterday skipped the town. It seems that Brown and Rowe were patronizing the same young lady with their attentions, and the trouble grew out of a jealousy which sprang up between them.

4000 POUNDS OF SOAP.—The Eugene Soap Company turned out one "batch" last week 4000 pounds of laundry soap. The Ashland Tidings says that it is reported that the fight to secure the relocation of the county seat of Jackson county will be opened by the introduction of a bill at the coming session of the legislature to submit the question to a vote of the people of that county at the next state and county election in June, 1898. The effort to secure a submission of the question to a vote of the people is said to emanate from Medford, with the idea that its location will make Medford a strong competitor with Jacksonville.
