BILYEU AND LEE.

The Corvallis Times says: The act of Bilyeu and Lee in entering the Mitchell joint convention was commendable. They are a hopeless minority and they have sense enough to know that the tail can-enough to know that the tail can-of primary election, claimed not, and should not, wag the dog. Unable themselves to dictate a surrender, unable too, to make peace between the warring factions H C Miller, juror circuit court, they holdly offer to act with the Davis house or the Benson house, or any rump or regular assemblage W F Martin, juror circuit court of legislators that offers a plan to convert the degenerate and un- J S McMurray, juror circuit seemly farce into a legitimate legislative organization.

the end. The consequences of adjournment without organization, N Winter, juror circuit court without at least, the passage of an appropriation bill, and without affording certain relief to taxpayers William Pool, juror circuit court will be serious. Bilyeu and Lee know this-they hope to avert it. They do not consider the Mitchell convention a regular organization, but they even to the extreme of joining it, in order to end the hold John Churchill, on ground for up and smooth the way for ending the senatorial fight in the dominant party that blocks lawmaking. The end to be attained justifies the Chas Schade, juror state vs A F means, and Bilyeu and Lee are consistent. If, having acted all Allen Chastian, juror state vs A the time with the Mitchell convention, they have left it, to join other assemblage of members that offered George Vaughan juror state vs A to do legislative business, their course would have been quite as W T Cornelius juror state vs A F praiseworthy. Their virtue lies in their tractability, a copious injection of which, in heroic doses, ought to be squirted into every legislator now holding forth at the state capitol.

Far behind the senatorial fight, says the Corvallis Times, is a mys tical interest in the Portland charter that ties Simon and Bourne to- Wilson White, witness state vs gether, and gives them common cause in perpetuating the legislative hold-up. an option on her, they were not engaged. But she knew that Brent loved her and that some day she would marry him, and he knew that she was the only woman he ever had loved or ever could love; that she filled his life and made it perfect. And he was sure that she knew this. In fact, there was between them what our grandmothers called an understanding.

Then there came a terrible misunderstanding. He could not understand, and she would not. What it was all about, how it began, neither could have told. He thought that he was ten minutes late for an appointment with her, and she thought -she didn't think, she lost or mislaid her tempor. "And it grow, and it grow," and so began their tale of wos. She was "out" several times when he called. So he stop ped calling. She refused an invitation to a dinner to which she knew he was asked. He waited an hour for her at a tea, and when ask came into the room he left it by another door and fled from the house. She say him go, and her face fell. Up to that time she had been prepared to forgive him graciously when the proper moment came, but when she saw him dis appear through those portieres she knew that she would never, never speak to him again. He walked several streets, cursing everything in general and one woman's intellect in particular. Then he retraced his steps and hung round the house like r veritable thief, waiting to see her come out and get into her carriage. When Mrs. Trenor's invitation to the baby's christening came, he wrote a regret because she was going to be godmother, but he did not send it. "No, by Jove!" he said savagely to himself. "She needn't think she can keep me away from every thing." He accepted the invitation, and sent the baby a silver rattle.

The Trenor parlors were full when he arrived, and she was not visible, so he went out into the conservatory. Soon there was a lush in the tabble of volces, and he looked through the window int the drawing room. His eyes in the win dow saw none of the gorgeous details, be cause she, the heantiful godmother, wa coming into the room carrying the baby The sweet valce of the godinother thrille one hearer, and then John Sherwood Tre nor received the congratulations and good wishes of his mother's friends, enduring it all with a calm, grave aspect, turnin, his round blue eyes occasionally on hi godmother to make sure that all wa right. She held him in her arms, talking to him and for him. Once she burled he face in his fluffy lace gown, and it was probably only an accident that it was a the very moment when Brent entered the room. Mrs. Trenor hastened to meet him

"Oh, Mr. Brent, yon're just in time to speak to Jacky before he goes back to the nursery. So good of you to come, and the blessed hamb wants to thank you for the heantiful ratile you sent him. He has hardly let go of it once. Doesn't Miss Sherwood look lovely? But, then, she always does.

His hostess rattled on, leading him nearcr and nearer to the little hero of the occasion. The little hero was beginning to be tired, and Miss Sherwood was comly absorbed in entertaining him

"Muyver's blessed lamb! Muyver's blue eyes"' Mrs. Trenor klassed the baby hands raptorously. "Will little white bear thank Uncle Jerry for the boo'ful rattle? he blessed?" she added to Brent, and flut

Pendleton citizens complain on account of muddy streets some which almost require swimming to cross. They should take a lesson in street building from Eugene. Although there is much more precipitation of moisture in our town than that of Eastern Oregon, our streets are clean, well kept and reasonably free from mud, even during the rainiest weather. They are graded and well rounded in the middle, then covered with a good coating of fine gravel. Where necessary drains are provided.

Jacky had succeeded in implanting his four little teeth in Brent's finger, and in his delight over his victory he flung the rattle on the floor. Miss Sherwood and Brent both stooped for it, and through mind ran a fervent wish that they would not bump heads. But nothing a commonplace happened. When they at tempted to rise, they found that were im prisoned. Jacky had seized the golden hair one hand and the crisp black locks in the other. Neither dared to use force to scenre freedom. Bables were unknown quantities to both of them. Perhaps Mis-Sherwood might have done something, but shu didn't. Hold on, old boy! Stop that!" came in othered accents from Brent, and even more smothered was the remark of conanation that followed.

Jacky did hold on, but not in the sense that Brent meant. He clutched both hands re and more firmly, hammering them together at intervals. The gleeful chuckles loud crowings of her boy attracted Mrs. Trenor's attention. She hastened across the room.

'Oh, little bear; nonie, nonie! Muvver's blessing! Muvver's little white bear mustn't pull hair."

She loosened the tiny fingers, but not before every one had observed the spectacle of two very red faces being hammered together by "nurver's little bear," Of ourse every one laughed, and of course Brent and Miss Sherwood had to make the best of it and laugh too.
