What is usually called "cold" soil is due mostly to excess of water which finds no outlet by staking into it, and is forced to evaporate from the surface. This takes so much beat from the soll that vegetation will not grow readily in it. Hence the cold soil is very often thin as well, coming quickly to the clay on which it rests. If this clay is underdrained air and frost will pulverize it, enabling deep-rosted plants to penetrate the soil and enrich it. Grapes, like other fruits, need to be field in corn. Part of the field had carefully handled to bring the best prices. The vines need to be gone over trequently during the riponing season, gathering only those with full color, because grapes do not, like other fruits, hel, being afraid I would get it too color after being gathered. The bunches should be cut off with a pair of seissors and so handled as not to disturb the bloom. Ordinary varieties may be at once packed from the vines into the busket that is intended for sale. Choice varieties should be gathered in shallow trays or baskets, in which they should stand a day or two on shelves in the fruit house, and then re-packed. By this treatment the stems will wilt, and the bunches will then keep without molding and pack more closely than when green.-Camadian Horticulturist.
