CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, Without injurious medication.

"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

JUDGE McARTHUR.

Judge Lewis L. McArthur of Portland, who died at Walla Walla yesterday afternoon, was born in Virginia, March 18, 1843. He graduated from the Dickinson college, Pennsylvania, and read law in Washington City, D C., and was admitted to the bar at York, Pa., in 1864, and began his legal work at that place. He came to Oregon in November 1864, and tarried a few months in Portland and then went to Umatilla, where he remained three years. He became clerk of Umatilla county and edited the Index, a democratic paper; he also assisted in the editorship of the Columbia Press. From that place he went to Auburn, Baker county where he practiced his profession and engaged in mining. While at this place he was elected county judge and moved to Baker City. In this place, in 1870, in connection with M D Abbott, he established the Bed Rock Democrat. The same year he was elected circuit judge; was re-elected in 1876 and again in 1880. In 1882 he resigned the office and resumed his legal practice at The Dalles. In 1884 he was a delegate to the democratic National convention, which nominated Grover Cleveland, president. In 1886 he was appointed U S Attorney for Oregon and after his term became a member of the law firm of Bronaugh, McArthur & Fenton, which he continued with until the time of his death. He has been a regent of the University of Oregon for twenty years and took great interest in the institution.

On the 10th day of June 1878 he was married to Miss Harriet K. Nesmith, daughter of the late Hon J W Nesmith. They have two sons, Clifton Nesmith and Lewis Ankeny. The Judge was a member of the Masonic order, the I O O F and of the A O U W.

Recorder Dorris is somewhat of a humorist himself. His improved addition to the proposed bicycle ordinance that pedestrians be compelled to wear head lights and ring bells had a demoralizing effect on the bicycle committee who were seeking favors at the hands of our city fathers.

HORRIBLE WAR.

Some very remarkable pictures are published in the May number of the Cosmopolitan magazine. There are half a dozen of them and they are photographic sketches of detached portions of battlefields taken on the scenes of action immediately after battles of the civil war.

These pictures do not show large numbers of the dead, but the terrible reality of the scenes, and positions of the dead, impress one with a horror of such a conflict. They are simply horrible.

And yet Nineteenth century civilization with all its boasted charity, humanity and advancement, is preparing engines of destruction far deadlier than were ever before even dreamed of! The age has not yet come when the lion and lamb will lie down together except the lamb occupies a position inside the lion

These are not pleasant days for Republican congressmen and senators who must present claims of their constituents for office. President McKinley has been compelled to notify members of congress that no consuls would be appointed until after the session of congress. Each member of congress has from one to twenty men in pursuit of him for a consulate. The names of all these men have been placed before the president and secretary of state. One senator has 50 men from his state who want to enter the consular service.

A number of cities have ordered their policemen to arrest bicycle scorchers on sight. It is very well to make such an order but we would like to know how a man that can run at the rate of twelve miles an hour can catch a man that is scorching along anywhere from twenty to thirty miles an hour The old saying to catch a thief with a thief might be applicable; furnish policemen with bicycles, and teach them to run a little faster than the scorchers.

Don Dickinson asked that one of his friends be retained as postmaster in a Michigan town as a sort of regard for his (Dickinson's) support of the McKinley ticket. The friend has been fired without warning and Don is now pondering over the ingratitude of those who profit by political treachery of the Dickinson stripe.

RESTORED TO CITIZENSHIP.

Gov Lord Gives a Full Pardon to an ex-Convict.

Salem Statesman of today: Gov W P Lord yesterday restored to full citizenship John E McDowell, who was sentenced to the penitentiary from Lane county for a two years' term, and entered the prison on March 10, 1896, having been found guilty of forgery. McDowell who was only a boy in years was made a trusty soon after entering the prison, and thereby shortened his sentence considerably, regaining his liberty one day last week The restoration was petitioned for by a large number of people, and, as the young man's conduct in the prison was highly spoken of, and he was going to another state, the restoration was made.

Learn to Grow Old Gracefully.

There is a most admirable lesson contained in the following extract from Hannah More's "Strictures on the Modern System of Female Education:" "Since, then, there is a season when the youthful must cease to be young and the beautiful to excite admiration, to learn to grow old gracefully is perhaps one of the rarest and most beautiful acts that can be taught to woman. And it must be confessed it is a most severe trial for those women to lay down their beauty who have nothing else to take up. It is for this sober season of life that education should lay up its rich resources. However disregarded they may have been, they will be wanted now. When admirers fall away and flatterers become mute, the mind will be driven to retire within itself, and if it finds no entertainment at home it will be driven back again upon the world with increased force. Yet, forgetting this, do we not seem to educate our daughters exclusively for the transient period of youth, when it is to maturer life we ought to advert? Do we not educate for a crowd, forgetting that they are to live at home—for a crowd and not for themselves, for show and not for use, for time and not for eternity?"

A Fallacy.

"I am called a clever man, so I am a living contradiction of the idea that men of education and intelligence do not marry women similarly endowed," said a successful author recently. "That a clever woman does not make a good wife is one of the most ridiculous of fallacies. There is nothing in life that a clever woman cannot and will not do better than a stupid one. Education develops a woman's power in every direction and makes her more capable of directing a household and constructing a pudding than she would be without it. The educated woman who imperfectly performs her duties in life would not have fulfilled them better, but much worse, if her mind had received no training. And the badly informed girl who cooks a good dinner and mends her husband's socks would do both a great deal better if her powers of mind and of intelligence had been cultivated and brought to bear on her daily work."—New York Advertiser.

To Free Furniture From Moths.

"Upholstered furniture can be kept free from moths," a western upholsterer says in a pamphlet on the subject, "by taking the furniture outside about once a month and beating it thoroughly with strips of ticking about an inch wide attached to a piece of broom handle. Should one hit the wood hard with this it will not mar it, while the regular rattan and wire beaters mar more parlor frames, ruin more covers and break up more inside filling than a dozen children could do. The main reason we have moths is we are always going to beat out our upholstery furniture, but rarely get around to it. Clothing, including furs, to be stored in the wardrobe during summer can be kept entirely exempt from attack if put into new flour sacks, linen sacks or anything of that nature and tightly tied so that a moth cannot enter at the mouth. Chests serve the same purpose when tight enough to prevent the moths from entering."

Swallowing Foreign Bodies.

The American Medical and Surgical Bulletin, in an article on this subject, says that pins, safety pins, pebbles, jackstones, etc., swallowed by children need occasion no alarm, as they will pass through without harming the child. The greatest danger is from the castor oil with which the child is usually dosed in such cases. It is better to leave the bowels at rest and give gruel, crackers, baked potatoes, milk, anything which will constipate the child and make a pultaceous mass in which the foreign bodies will be embedded and carried through. When foreign bodies stick in the throat and the child is unable to swallow, it should receive an emetic, or the coin catcher should be introduced. This is a basketlike affair easily used. In one case both a 1 cent and a 2 cent piece were removed at the same time by this instrument.

MUNICIPAL LEGISLATURE.

Regular Meeting of City Fathers—Usual Amount of Business Done

DAILY GUARD, May 11

Council met in regular session at chambers in city hall last evening at 8 o'clock. Present, Mayor Kuykendall, Councilmen Day, Fisher, Horn and Luckey.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The finance committee reported favorably on the usual number of bills, which were ordered paid. On the proposition of C F Croner to sprinkle the streets the committee reported adversely.

Mr Day, from the judiciary committee, reported that in the matter of changes in the license ordinance, committee was against any general amendments. On motion of Mr Gray the matter was left with the judiciary committee to draft such amendments as they may think advisable. Carried.

Mr Fisher read the monthly report of the street committee, which was ordered filed.

A petition was read from the G A R and W R C, asking that a donation of $25.00 be made by the council to assist in defraying the expenses of the observances of Memorial day. Laid on the table.

Ordinance amending salary of officers read second time. Fisher moved to amend salary of marshal to read "$480 per year." Carried. Mr Gray moved to amend further so as to read, "salary treasurer $100 per annum; salary, city attorney $75 per annum."

Mr Day moved to refer the ordinance back to the judiciary committee with instructions to prepare proposed amendments. Carried.

The ordinance vacating certain streets and alleys in Martin's addition to read second time by title and referred to judiciary committee.

A bicycle ordinance read and referred to judiciary committee.

At request of Mr Gray the city attorney informed the council of the progress and status of the case of Lane county vs the city of Eugene, and he was instructed to make such answer as was necessary to protect the city's interests.

An ordinance extending the fire limits south on the west side of Willamette street, read first time.

For the information of the council the mayor read some rules of order for the government of its proceedings. Referred to a special committee: Day, Henderson and Fisher.

A message to the council from the mayor was then read. It treated of the present financial condition of the city, its revenues, indebtedness, prospects, etc. This was aimed simply as information to the members of the council to enable them to act more intelligently in the management of municipal finances. The message was ordered spread upon the minutes.

A number of bills were read and referred to the finance committee.

Adjourned.

A VALUABLE SOUVENIR.—When Perry Frank attended the centennial ceremonies in the East he procured a piece of wood that was taken from the old flagship "Lawrence" the boat on which Commodore Perry made such an enviable record during the war of 1813 on Lake Erie, the old boat being resurrected from its watery resting place at that time. To fittingly keep this historical relic Mr Frank has carved it into a cane and had a silver plate placed thereon on which is engraved the following words: "Perry Frank, Eugene, Or. This cane is made from a piece taken from the old ship Lawrence. Sunk on Lake Erie during Perry's battle in the year 1813."

MARRIED.—Miss Fayne Strahan, daughter of the late Chief Justice Strahan, of the Oregon supreme bench, was married April 9, 1897, in New York City to Mr William A E Moore, of New York. The marriage was a quiet affair, being attended by only the relatives and a few near friends of the contracting parties. Mr Moore is a capitalist of New York, being interested in the development of South African mining properties. Mr and Mrs Moore sailed for Europe May 1, for a tour of the continent. They will be at the Belgravia hotel, 72 Victoria street, London, until September 1.

ASSESSOR'S WORK.—D W Coolidge, deputy assessor, who is now doing the field work in the Eugene precincts, expects to have his work completed in a couple of weeks. The field work of the entire county will be completed, it is thought, by June 1, as Assessor Burton has a number of deputies out, and is now at Cottage Grove himself assisting in the work.

POLICE COURT.—The trial of L A Ross in the police court today resulted in his being fined $5 and costs, a total of $15. He was given until noon tomorrow to liquidate. The charge preferred against him was that of turning his horses out in the streets and refusing to keep them up after being ordered to do so by the marshal.

BORN.—May 5, 1897, to Dr and Mrs J W Harris a son. Mother and child doing nicely.

AN OLD STORY.

Some years ago, 15 or 20 maybe, at one of the posts in the far west there was a colonel in command whose fame as an Indian fighter was undeniable and even passed muster in the states. His courage and sagacity had been proved a hundred times. He was big and strong and gentle. The red men called him "The Great Chief" and were mortally afraid of him. His own men only called him "The Chief," and they adored him. But he couldn't play cards, which was a pity, as there is nothing else to do when the Indians are quiet. All the other officers could very well, most of them, and as it was their only amusement, they naturally preferred that he should not spoil the game. Particularly the captain objected, for he played exceedingly well and with an enthusiasm that was almost too pronounced, unless one took into consideration the total absence of other forms of entertainment. A man who couldn't play cards was a very poor sort of man in his eyes, and a man who was superbly fearless and yet entirely modest was one to be jealously admired and secretly, but none the less intensely, hated.

There was also a nice young lieutenant of two and twenty who played poker very well—not so well as the captain perhaps, but he had a gay, boyish and rather provoking way of being willfully lucky that made him a very fair adversary.

He and the captain were deep in it one night, and things were growing interesting. The lieutenant was laughing now and again excitedly. The captain's face was white and drawn, and his hands shook a little. Winter quarters are made as comfortable as possible in a rough and ready fashion, and when there is a woman in the case they are generally attractive enough, for a soldier's wife learns many a makeshift, and marvelous effects can be got with boxes and barrels, some straw and a few yards of muslin and colored stuffs. But the captain's rooms were bare enough, and when the colonel knocked and was abruptly told to "come," the dreariness of it all hit him hard, and he built up the neglected fire without ceremony before he strolled over to the table and drew up a chair.

At the first pause in the game he invited himself to join in. The captain rather gruffly invited him not to, for, as I said before, cards were not his strong point, but when the young lieutenant incautiously suggested that the stakes were rather high he laughed his mellow laugh and said he had a few dollars to lose. So since even when off duty and playing poker a soldier cannot shake off a certain obedience to his superior officer, he got his way. But the captain's brow grew black, and his hand stopped shaking.

The game went on for half an hour or so with no unusual incident. The colonel bungled his cards and lost his money, but he was accustomed to that. He never could be made to understand that poker was anything more than a pastime, and so he laughed his low laugh and played on. After awhile the captain threw the cards under the table and took a new pack "for luck." Half a dozen officers had dropped in and were looking on, but nobody objected—it was the custom. It came the colonel's turn to deal. With his usual gentle, smiling awkwardness he fumbled the cards, dealt them, and when it came to his own hand dropped one of them on the floor. Without looking he stooped and gathered a card from under the table. His face brightened. The captain sent a quick look at him, and his face was whiter than ever. The hand was played out, and the colonel won. With an almost childlike laugh of pleasure, he put out his hand to draw in his winnings, when the captain sprang to his feet and brought his own hand down on the cards. "Gentlemen, I denounce this man as a cheat!" He lifted his hand, and there was one blue back among the red ones scattered over the table.

In the turmoil that followed the colonel was almost dragged out of the room by his friends and got away. Of course there was nothing for it but to fight. His friends, and they were many, waited for his orders. But after the first burst of rage he seemed stupefied. He sat perfectly silent, staring straight in front of him. Finally his fellow officers spoke. He must do something. A challenge was written, sent and declined. There was an uproar of indignation. Not only the colonel's honor, but the honor of the army was at stake. He must horsewhip the man, since he would not fight. There was nothing else for it. So they talked and argued excitedly, sternly, and the colonel listened dully and said yes, he must horsewhip him. He staid in doors that night, and the post talked of the morning.

At 10 o'clock the next day the troops were drawn up in line ready for parade. The captain stood in front of his company. Every man and woman at the post was there to see "The Chief" horsewhip the scoundrel who had dared to insult him. The excitement was intense. There was a deathlike stillness, and every eye was strained as the colonel walked slowly across the parade ground. His face was white and stern and his step firm and deliberate. In his hand was a twisted leather whip such as teamsters use driving mules.

The captain saw him coming and stood like a rock, with his arms folded and a cold smile of unutterable contempt and malignant hatred on his face. When his adversary stopped in front of him, he raised his head and without changing his position looked him straight in the eyes, his black and evil face set in an expression of devilish scorn. With a gesture of noble indignation the colonel raised his whip in the air, held it poised a moment, and then the brave soldier, the superb gentleman, shrank back weakly, dropped his whip to the ground and buried his face in his hands. Then he turned, went back to his quarters and shut the door behind him.

A few hours later, in sheer spite, some of his friends went to him, but the door was locked. The next day he left the post, and a few days later resigned from the army.—Jean Wright in Lippincott's Magazine.

Noble Indiscretion.

The Empress Eugenie was often willful and capricious because the romantic impulses of the woman made it hard for her to submit to the restraints of the sovereign. Those impulses once made her nobly indiscreet, when discretion, seemingly, was the price of safety, if not of life.

The catastrophe of Sedan obliged her to flee from the Tuileries, and to pass unknown was of vital importance. While driving from Paris to Trouville, under the escort of Dr. Evans, the American dentist, she saw a gendarme ill using a man in the street. Springing forward, regardless of her own safety, she cried, "I am the empress and I command you to let that man go!" Dr. Evans thrust her back upon the seat, and explained to the bystanders that she was an insane woman traveling under his care. It was magnificent in the woman, even if it were indiscreet in the empress.
