THEIR NAMES VARY.

Restaurant waiters who are addressed differently morning and evening. Some people have names which they received in the ordinary way, and some have names thrust upon them, and many waiters who are employed in different parts of the city have several names, none of which was given to them by the persons who are usually vested with authority on that point. Laidorous situations and complications have resulted from this cause.

Long before the wholesale houses and offices close their doors for business the day's work is over in these restaurants. The waiters go to their homes for a little rest, and toward evening the same men may be seen in up town beerhouses, clubs and wine saloons, where they meet another class of people. There the waiter serves beer and all sorts of German delicacies, from Frankfurter and sauerkraut to kalder schmidt, and a French name would not be in harmony with the surroundings. There are Pauls and Hermanns and Fritzes in these places who would be surprised to be addressed by any other name, although a few hours before they were Pierre, Henri or Francois. For years these men have a morning and an evening name. One waiter said recently that he had been called Felix in his down town place for years, and that no one thinks of calling him anything but Herrmann in the kitchen where he serves beer at night.

PARIS OMNIBUSES.

A System That Gives Every Passenger a Comfortable Seat. On all the streets of Paris one of the features most noticeable to a foreigner is the little omnibus stations so characteristic of Paris. The Parisian omnibus system, by the way, is an excellent one when you understand it. But you usually have to be put off a bus two or three times before you appreciate its merits. In time you discover that the vehicles stop regularly at little stations, where those who understand the system obtain bits of numbered bearing numbers in the pocket-order of the application for them, entering the number on an official card, and standing behind it to call off the numbers in their order, and the would be passengers, as their numbers are called, take the vacant places. When all the vacancies are filled, the bus drives on, and those whose numbers come next in order have, of course, the first chance at the vacant seats in the buses as they arrive. And now let me mention another feature of this omnibus system which I think is worthy of our notice. Each omnibus and each street car in Paris—or the street car system is practically the same—is built to seat not to carry, mind you, but to seat a certain number of persons. That number is indicated upon the exterior of the vehicle, and when it is complete no more are permitted to enter under any circumstances. Our glorious American system, therefore, of riding on a strap or getting one foot on the back platform of the street car and clinging to the unfortunate individual who has preceded us, and has both feet on it, is wholly unknown in Paris.—Chautauque.

Crete and Its Natives.

The peculiarly favorable position of the island, situated at the junction of three continents, as it were, and commanding the coasts of all three, has invested it from the earliest times with an importance such as neither Sicily, Sardinia, nor Cyprus, although much larger in area, ever attained. While forming in prehistoric times a stepping stone for Egyptian and Asiatic civilization in its progress toward the shores of Greece, Crete remained throughout antiquity singularly free from any close political connection with Egypt, Asia or Greece. This insularity is the basis of one of the marked characteristics of the Cretan people, and without accepting the view that they are the purest descendants of the Hellenes of the eighth century B. C., we must regard them nevertheless as one of the most interesting branches of the Greek race. Unfortunately, the greatest defects of the ancient Greek character were nowhere so pronounced as in Crete, and we are told that its history throughout antiquity was one continuous chain of civil strife, carried on with a savageness and bitterness of animosity exceeding all that was known in the rest of Greece. This political depravity was attended by such a degeneration of morals as to render the name of "Cretan" a synonym for nearly every vice—Demetrius Kalipolchos in Century.

Big Building Needed.

"If I could only find a large enough building," said the thoughtful man, "I would get up an exhibition that would make my rivaling for fame." "What's the matter with the Coliseum?" "Not half large enough," answered the thoughtful man. "I don't believe it would hold half the exhibits." "What's your scheme? What kind of an exhibition would you have?" "Why, I would get a building large enough I would make a collection of the first bicycle ever made. I estimate from the accounts I have seen that there are something like 4,000 of them."—Chicago Post.

DEMURRER SUSTAINED.

Judge Fullerton Holds That Lane County Must Pay Her State Taxes. His Reasons For So Deciding. Considerable interest has been taken by the people in the case wherein the board of county commissioners enjoined the county treasurer from paying the entire amount of Lane county's tax to the state. The total amount due the state for Lane county was $25,004.56, and on April 19 Treasurer Patterson remitted $500 to the state treasurer. In the injunction the court allowed him to pay the sum of $492.28 or 25 per cent of the amount they deemed that a sufficient amount to pay the state at this time. On May 25, Treasurer Patterson remitted the balance of the amount allowed in the injunction, or $1482.28.

The case came up in the June term of the circuit court for Lane county, and was argued and submitted, Judge Fullerton taking the same under advisement. Yesterday Clerk Jennings received his findings in the case as follows:

In the circuit court of the State of Oregon, in and for the county of Lane, E. O. Potter, county judge, J. T. Callahan and W. T. Bailey, county commissioners, constituting the board of county commissioners of Lane county, Oregon, plaintiffs, versus A. S. Patterson, as treasurer of Lane county, defendant.

The above entitled cause came on for hearing at the regular June, 1897, term of said court upon defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's complaint, the plaintiffs appearing by E. O. Potter and T. Harris, deputy district attorney, and the defendant by A. C. Woodcock, his attorney.

After hearing the argument of counsel and being in doubt as to what order should be made upon said demurrer, the said cause was taken under advisement for further consideration; and now having fully considered the same find that said demurrer should be sustained.

Wherefore it is ordered that defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's complaint be and the same is hereby sustained. Done at chambers at Roseburg, Oregon, this 10th day of July, 1897. J. C. FULLERTON, Judge.

Judge Fullerton also sent the following explanatory of his decision, which was placed on file also:

"In sustaining the demurrer to the complaint in this proceeding, I do not wish to be understood as holding that the whole of the state tax should be paid out of the first moneys collected by the sheriff and turned over to the county treasurer. I think there is a good deal of force in the contention made in the circuit court of Multnomah county in the proceedings pending therein, to the effect that the county treasurer should pay to the state treasurer the state's proportion of the tax as collected, and I am inclined to think that a fair construction of Section 2813 of the code is to that effect. But I am of the opinion that the county treasurer cannot withhold any part of the money collected for state tax and apply it in the payment of claims against the county.

"A fixed amount is collected each year from the taxpayer for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the state government. A certain per cent of the money paid by each taxpayer is for the state. The amount of the tax for each county is fixed by the state authorities and apportioned by the county court of each county between the taxpayers of the county and added to the levy for county and other purposes, and when paid by the taxpayer and turned over to the county treasurer by the sheriff, becomes a trust fund in the hands of the treasurer of the county for the use and benefit of the state and cannot be deviated from the purpose for which it was collected.

"The New York World, although it supported McKinley in the campaign last year, now says: 'The Republicans are in supreme control of the national government. They have had ample opportunity to try their hand, but prosperity has not come nor do we see any sign of its coming, and we cannot even see the shadow of it under the far horizon. Meanwhile the silver sentiment is steadily growing and strengthening and the figure of Bryan as the man of 1900 looms larger and larger.'

The Dallas people have the Bryan fever very bad. They have invited him to speak to them from the railroad train when it passes through at one o'clock in the morning. Our Eugene people thought 4:19 o'clock in the morning rather early.

Basytimes for the farmers this year. Hay and wheat harvest are almost together. Fruit and hop harvests will soon be on us. Abundant yields of all the products, for which Oregon is famous, are the rule this season.

Willamette valley has size, flavor and quality that cannot be excelled. All it needs is to be cared for with the same interest that is taken with gardens and grain fields. The new orchards that have received attention are convincing the people that the growers who invested their money in orchard work were not visionary. Mistakes have been made, and time and experience will be required to secure the best results. That was to have been expected. We got fairly good fruit of uncultivated vines covered with unpurged trees for years, and were not aware of the far superior product that care and cultivation would give. That fruit growing era is a thing of the past. The only question remaining is for the growers to place their fruits, preserved and green, on the market in a condition that will give the consumer an opportunity to test its excellence. That is the present problem for the fruit grower.

BILL JONES AND THE FINANCIER.

The people are thinking about the money question as they never thought before. They have concluded to take some of the job of financing the country off the shoulders of the money loaners of Wall and Lombard streets. Heretofore when the financiers got together and told the people they were the only ones that knew anything about the finances of the country, and the proper way to conduct them, they were believed and all owed free rein. It is different now. Plain Bill Jones may not have as much collateral as financier Rothschilds, but he knows something about the value of money, and the work it takes to get it. He does not propose to stand back and allow Mr Rothschilds to impose the terms on which it may be had. That kind of substitution has made Bill Jones poor. The plain Bill Joneses are being educated.
