The new Eastern squadron will consist of the battleships Iowa and Orezon, the protected cruiser Newark and the auxiliary cruisers (carrying side armor) Dixie, Yankee and Yosemite; the colliers Avernda, Cassius, Caesar, Hobson and his men were escorted Leonidas and Justin, and the supplyboat Delmonico.

The lowa, Oregon and Newark are all in the south with Sampson; so is the Yosemite. The Dixie is at Newport and the Yankee at Tompkinsville. The colliers are at Hampton Roads with the Delmonico.

The ships are to sail as soon as they can coal and supply. It will not be required, in the case of the southeastern vessels, to come north, which would mean the loss of several days, but they will start directly from the points where they are now located.

The order provides that each ship shall make her way across the Atlantic to a marine rendezvous, which will be designated in sealed orders to prevent its exposure to the slightest possible danger from the enemy, and the most that is known is that it will be at some point off the Spanish coast. It probably will not be long after that before the American squadron will be in full pursuit of Camara with his remnant of the Spanish navy.
