ASSAULT BY BRANTON.

A Correction of Several Statements Inaccurately Reported.

The GUARD's report of the assault made by Claude Branton on Deputy Sheriff Day was hastily written and contained several inaccuracies which should be corrected. The diagram of the jail showing location of the men is republished and corrected according to a statement made by Sheriff Withers this morning. By this correction it will be seen that Branton had been left in the corridor, instead of another cell. Sheriff Withers had been assisting in searching the cell, and was in the corner indicated as "D," unbuckling the stretcher, when Branton rushed through the cell door from the corridor.

Deputy Day was on his hands and knees with a lighted candle in his hand cleaning an iron ventilator (the position being indicated in the diagram) when he heard a rush across the cement floor, felt a vice-like grip on his neck and a hand forced into his hip pocket after his revolver. Branton had stealthily made a rush, and murderously assaulted him. The deputy's hand reached his revolver almost the same instant that Branton's did, and gripping the murderer by the wrist the deputy twisted his arm around out of danger.

The sheriff thus had only to whirl on his heel to grab Branton, as before detailed quickly choking him into submission. Neither sheriff nor deputy thought that it would be necessary to guard Branton while two men were with him, but they have changed their mind somewhat now, and it is safe to say he will be given all the attention due his position. Of course what Branton really would have done had he secured the revolver is problematical yet a man of his desperation would be expected to handle it to his own advantage.

"X" in the diagram shows where Deputy Sheriff Day was, in a kneeling posture, when pounced upon by Branton, who started from "D." Sheriff Withers stood at "D."

BABY'S AWFUL HUMOR

My baby sister had a rash, causing her intense suffering. We had doctors, and tried everything, without a cure. It would scab over, crack open, a watery matter would come out and the scab fall off. We procured a box of CASTORIA (ointment), a cake of CASTORIA SOAP, and CASTORIA (powder), and she was entirely cured without a scar being left.

SATURDAY'S GAME

A Detailed Account of The Gridiron Contest.

TEMPLETON'S TEAM A STRONG ONE.

As was stated in Saturday's GUARD, the University of Oregon defeated Chemawa, by a score of 24 to 0. It was the first game of the season and its result shows the U of O to have a remarkably strong team.

The bright particular star of the day was Butterworth, Eugene's left half back. His long runs were the chief features of the game. Butterworth was ably backed up by Templeton at full back, who never failed to gain, when the ball was passed to him. Captain R. S. Smith of the U of O team played an ideal game while he lasted, but was forced to retire at the close of the first half, on account of injuries. Starr displayed wonderful ground-gaining ability and McClanahan at quarter was cool headed and sure. Jakeway's playing at tackle was of high order, especially the second half. Wilson, Angel, Rudings and Carrio all did good work in the line and Young and Zeigler each played well at end.

Robert Sanders, captain of the Chemawa's played an ideal game and had the team given him the support which he merited the result might have been somewhat different. Hessel at right end put up a strong steady game, and Pattee at center stopped some line bucks that might have resulted in large gains for the varsity men. Although the Indian team contained some good individual players, its team work was poor and the men seemed to lose their heads at critical moments.

THE FIRST HALF

The players made their appearance at three o'clock, and the preliminaries were quickly arranged, the U of O taking the east goal and Chemawa the kick off. It was just 3:09 o'clock, when Sanders kicked off and amid wild cheering from the side lines, the game began.

Templeton standing on Eugene's 15 yard line caught the ball and advanced it 20 yards before he was downed by Graham. On the first line up Templeton went through the center for 5 yards and followed it up with another line buck of ten yards. Butterworth struck left end for five yards and Smith made a beautiful run of 25 yards around the same side. Templeton made three pretty line bucks, which netted 15 yards and Starr gained three on a straight buck. Templeton carried the ball to Chemawa's 8 yard line and on the next play, Starr went over the goal line for a touch-down, amid terrific cheering. Time 3 min 45 sec. A goal was impossible and U of O tried a kick-off which failed.

Butterworth caught the next kick off and passed the ball to McClanahan, who returned it.

The Indians failed to gain and the ball went to U of O on downs. Starr failed to gain and Templeton made 3 yards through left tackle. Eugene punted to Sanders who was stopped by Templeton.

Smith broke through the line and stopped Ferris for a loss. Pugh gained 5 yards and Sanders made two through the line. Sanders punted to Butterworth who gained 18 yards before he was downed. Templeton bucked left tackle for 10 yards, Jakeway gained six around the right end. Templeton made three on a line buck and Butterworth went straight through for six. Starr followed with a gain of eight yards and Smith made seven on "guard's back." Starr made 20 yards on the same play and Wilson gained five on the left end. Butterworth tore away from his interference and made a sensational run of 32 yards for a touch down. McClanahan kicked goal.

McClanahan returned the kick off, Ferris failed to gain. Angel made an off-side play and the Indians were given ten yards. Sanders bucked the line for ten yards and it looked as if the Chemawa's would soon score. But Eugene took a brace, and Butterworth gained five yards around the left end. Smith and Starr both lost and McClanahan punted. The Indians failed to gain and the ball went to the U of O on downs. Smith ran left end for ten yards; Butterworth was sent through left tackle for eight, and Templeton through the center for another gain. Butterworth again broke away from his interference and made the star play of the day, by running 40 yards, through a scattered field for a touch down. McClanahan kicked a very difficult goal.

McClanahan returned the kick off, the Indians fumbled and Templeton fell on the ball. Butterworth made two gains, which netted the U of O 20 yards. Templeton bucked the line for five, and Jakeway made eight gain. Butterworth in three downs gained 28 yards and Templeton went through left tackle for 18. Smith gained 10 on "guard's back" and Templeton bucked the line for a touch down. McClanahan kicked a goal.

In the next scrimmage, Smith was hurt and unable to play in the second half. The first half ended with the ball in the middle of the field. Score: U of O, 23; Chemawa, 0.

SECOND HALF

Ridings took Smith's place at tackle and Carrio went in as center. McClanahan kicked off, Sanders catching

SHOWERS OF STARS NEXT

Fireworks in the Skys This Month of November.

Most Dazzling Displays Since the Scare of 1666—Leonid Meteors Will Fall on Nov. 13th, and Those of Andromeda on Nov. 27th.

Two great meteoric displays are billed for this month. On Nov. 13th and Nov. 27th, according to Garret P. Servis and other astronomers who are acting as advance agents for the show, there will be, for two nights only, "a dazzling, pyrotechnical panorama of stupendous magnitude, and an unapproachable in beauty."

The first of these displays will result from the first meeting of the advancing columns of the great Leonid meteors, which envelop the earth in fiery spectacles once in every thirty-three and a quarter years, or three times in a century. The main mass of these meteors is due in November, 1899, but, since their array extends over a length of at least 2,000,000,000 miles, they require not less than three years to pass the place where their orbit intersects that of the earth. Accordingly astronomers are confident that their leading files will be streaming in hundreds of thousands, across the point of intersection when our globe arrives there about Nov. 13th, 1898. The tocsin of science has been sounded, star maps and directions to observers have been scattered broad cast, the latest improvements in photography have been enlisted in the service, and the astronomical world is on the qui vive for the expected encounter.

The other great shower occurs on the night of Nov. 27th, and will be caused by the meeting of the earth with the meteors known as the Andromedes, or Bielids, which are closely related to the famous missing comet of Biela, if they are not, in fact, scattered debris of that itself. These meteors were last seen in a great shower in 1885, when a huge ball of blazing iron dropped out of the sky while it was filled with their dazzling trains and buried itself in the earth near Mazapil, in Mexico. That meteor, or piece of comet, is now in a mineralogical museum in Europe, and the man who finds another like it, after the shower next month, will possess a treasure for which the scientific world will envy him.

The adventures of the two great troops of meteors which are now rushing rapidly toward the earth have been varied and startling, and the future may have still more remarkable things in store for them and for us. The Leonids (thus called because they appear to radiate from the constellation Leo) hold, like the Andromedes, close relation with a comet which is traveling in the same track. Every time they meet the earth they suffer violent perturbations.

It is the only remedy that will cure these ailments without any other treatment. It is the only remedy that will cure these ailments without any other treatment.

on the 12th of November, 1833, was such as the world has very rarely experienced. In 1866, when the earth next encountered the Leonid meteors the display was magnificent, but not so overwhelming as in 1833. Brilliant showers were seen in the years immediately preceding and following 1866, and this fact is a principal reason for expecting a display this year. Whether we shall now encounter a compact column of the meteors or a comparatively scattered mass no one can foretell, but that many will be seen may be regarded as a certainty. Even the precise time when the most brilliant spectacle will be presented is not known. The Harvard college observatory advises watchers to begin their vigil about November 11th and keep it up until the stars fade in the morning twilight on Nov. 15th. The constellation Leo, from which the meteors appear to emanate, rises about 10:30 o'clock, so that all the meteors seen before midnight will appear shooting up like sky-rockets from the northeastern horizon. Later on the radiant point approaches the mid-heaven in the early morning hours and the tracks of the meteors, when traced backward, will appear to meet like ribs of a gigantic umbrella spread over the earth.

The Andromeda meteors, due on Nov. 27th, have even a more remarkable career than that of the Leonids, although their history is comparatively brief. They were never seen before 1872, although previous to that time a well known comet traveled in their track. Something wonderful happened to that comet fifty years ago. Just what it was nobody knows—possibly a clash with an asteroid—but after the accident, whatever it may have been, the unfortunate comet was found to have been broken in two. It survived the separation, although its parts had been flung hundreds of thousands of miles asunder, and, continuing along its former orbit, came back as a double comet in 1899.

But when it was next due, in 1872, instead of the twin comets, a dash of the meteors appeared in the sky, indicating that the comets had met with another disaster, and that the earth had encountered a portion of their shattered remnants. In 1885 the meteors appeared again, and, in the midst of their display, an iron mass fell from the sky in Mexico. Now, in 1898, they are due once more, and what surprises they have in store for us nobody can tell.
