And Though He Was 75 Years Old Mr Pengra Married Her.

Dally Guard Nov II. Today's Oregonian: B J Pengra, a well-knewn Oregon pioneer, aged 75, came to Portland the other day, and all the way from Klamath Falls, in quest of a wife. Mr Pengra is an ardent spiritualist, a firm believer in WILL BE HERE THANKSGIVING that strange doctrine of his sect, the doctrine of affinity, which asserts that every human soul must have a count-reart, and that, though some mysterious but convenient manipulation in the spirit world, two such souls must mevitably be drawn together and united, either here or in the hereaf er, and either with or without their sees-Whether it is because of the truth of the theory, or because of his own very definite and avowed seeking, it is quite true to fact that scarcely had Mr Pengra set his foot in Portland when he met his presumptive affinity and prospective bride in the person of Mrs Lucretia Bigalow for nine years past a successful dressmaker in the city, who had thed of a long-protracted widowhood, and who was also bent upon relieving her loneliness in the holy bonds of matrimony.

A friend of both the parties, knowing their wu ual intent, out of the kindness of her heart caused their story-a long and sad one. He was meeting at her house immediately after Mr Pengra's arrival. This was one week ago last Friday night. The two bad never heard of each other before. The following morning they were he went to the ty; hold fever hospital marries, George Hyland, an ordained minister of the church of theosophy in Portland, officiating. Tuesday night a reception was given to the newly married couple at the home of Mrs. Rufus Mallory, at which they were the recipients of numerous congratula tions and supposedly of as many substantial gifts as an alliance of such unusual and somewhat surprising abruptness would permit.
