AN EFFECTIVE PARABLE.

General Jouhert's Story Saved the Lives of the Jameson Raiders.

A most interesting account of the manuer in which the lives of Jameson and his men were spared, after the surrender to the Boers, is told by the Nieuws Van den Dag of Amsterdam:

The stern old Boers, when they had Jameson and his fellow officers in their hands, determined to execute the leaders of the band at daybreak. The mosting took place in President Kruger's house, 20 being present, of whom the great neajority, wild with indignation at the sudden inroad into their territory, were for shooting the British offl-

President Kruger opposed this sum mary plan and used all his eloquence and all his influence on behalf of the prisoners. For a long time his efforts were vain. It was 4 o'clock in the morning, and the president's opponents were still for execution. The lives of the foreigners hung by a thread. At length General Joubert, one of the few who agreed with the president, had recourse to the old time Boer method of convincing his hearers. He made use of a parable

"Friends," he said, "will you not listen to my voice once more? Suppose that close to my farm lives a had neigh bor who keeps fierce bounds in his house, worrying my sheep exceedingly and also killing some. What, then, would you have me to do? Should I kill the hounds to be free of this worry? Truly my neighbor would say unto me: 'Thou hast killed my hounds, yet their value is greater than the value of your sheep. Pay thou me!' Is it not better ruary; another prespective Woodman, that I should take the hounds and going into my neighbor's house say, These are thine; now pay me for the harm they have done my flock?' "

There was silence, and the general continued: "We have caught the pack. Is it not better to send them to the British government with demands for people at the Dexter school house reparation, lest the British send more hounds to worry us anew?"

The old form of argument proved successful. The wisdom of moderation war accepted the advice of their chiefs. hard y expected to live.

SERVANTS' EXCUSES.

One Woman Who Was Clever Enough to Circumvent Them.

We have heard the story of the Canadian mistress who, with seven servants in her house, was obliged to go to the garden and pick berries for the table. Each of the servants declined the task with the stereotyped excuse, "It ain't my place to pick berries." Ord, in his "History of Cleveland," relates an anecdote of Margaret Wharton, who, while accepting her servants' excuse, yet rande them do her will.

In one of her visits to Scarborough Mrs. Wharton, with her usual economy, had a family pie for dinner, which she directed the footman to convey to the bakehouse. This the man declined to do as not belonging to his place, or rather, as derogatory to his consoquence. The lady then moved the question to the coachman, but found a still stronger objection.

To save the pride of both Mrs. Wharton resolved to take the pin to the barness and bring out the horses and the other to mount and ride behind, and thus the errand was done with all henor and ceremony. Then in due time the coachman was ordered to put to a secend time and the footman to mount be-
