An Unfortunate Participle. A recent discussion at a dinner table, whether "gotten" or "got" were the preferable participle, received a practical solution, at least for the telegraphic service, from an experience related of a college professor who preferred "got He had telegraphed to his wife ten. "Have gotten tickets for the theater tonight Meet me there. The telegraph operator rendered this into "Have got ten tickets," etc. Mrs. Professor was delighted with the opportunity of entertaining her friends and accordingly made up a party of eight besides herself, whose greetings to the professor at the rendezvous were probably more cordial than his feeling until matters were explained. He now makes an exception to his customary use of "gotten."

A Swift Bird.

The Mexican road munner has only two short legs, but he can beat a horse a bound or an electric carriage and give them a handicap start.

Speed is not his only recommendation. He cats as he runs, or rather as the things run away from him. Snakes are the principal part of his diet, big and little. His crop is as elastic as his legs are swift, and when he wants to prepare for a long journey he coils up a rattler or two inside of his neck and sets out across the Mexican desert with a swiftness that makes it look like a bunch of dust on a record breaking tour
