General Resume of Eugene Events.

THE SEASON AT ITS HEIGHT.

FAREWELL TO COACH SIMPSON.
Frank W. Simpson, of the University of California, who has been a guest of the U. O. football team the past two seasons, was tendered a banquet last evening in the grill room at Taylor & Holden's, given by young ladies of the 'Varsity and city. The menu and tables bore evidence in their coloring of the nature of the event, the blueness of U. O. and yellow of U. O. and U. O. being conspicuous from every point of vantage.

The menu was as follows:
Roast Beef
Chicken Salad a la mayonnaise
Cold Ham
Cold Tongue
Sautéed Potatoes
Bread and Butter
Ice cream and cake
Coffee
Cocoa
Theresa Friendly, a student, mistress, displayed a native talent for being the inspiration of happy thoughts. H. D. Angell responded to "The Players." L. L. Goodrich to "The Management." Miss Barnard to "The Coeds." Captain Dick Smith to "The Team." Coach Simpson made his farewell talk, Miss Lulu Renshaw recited an original poem on the Thanksgiving game entitled "35 to zero." MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA.

Hon. Ralph E. Johnson, of Lincoln, Nebraska, head lecturer for the Modern Woodmen of America, addressed a good audience at the Parker last night in the interests of the order. Fraternal insurance is a subject attracting universal attention in the United States in this epoch, and Mr. Johnson found occasion during the evening to show to advantage the beneficiary work of the Modern Woodmen, the remarkable growth of the order, which in 16 years has attained a membership of half a million, as well as the fraternity, which of itself stands as a guarantee of right not to be disregarded. L. J. Stevens, presiding officer of Eugene camp No. 5837, introduced the speaker and acted as chairman of the meeting. Several musical numbers added to the pleasure of the evening.

THOSE SHOES.—J. W. Kays advertised yesterday's GUARD for an exchange of shoes made at Artisan's hall, Arthur Stouffer is the man with whom Mr. Kays did business. There is some difference in the accounts the gentlemen give of the affair. Anyhow both are glad to get their property back as No 7 shoes will not fit No 8 1/2 feet, nor 8 1/2 shoes No 7 feet.

TO REFORM SCHOOL.—Superintendent H. E. Bickers, of the State Reform School, arrived here last night, and this afternoon on the 13th train took Frank Park to the school. Frank had an excellent record while at school, and it is too bad he did not sustain it while out on parole.

HEARD FROM

Metneuh Lost Upwards of 1,000 Killed in Three Battles.

WANTS REINFORCEMENTS.

SPECIAL TO THE GUARD.
LONDON, Dec. 2.—Lord Metneuh has not advanced beyond the Molder river.

In the three battles he lost upwards of one thousand killed and disabled. The Boers inflicted damage everywhere. They fought like demons.

Lord Metneuh will not attempt to advance until he has received reinforcements.

Endless Chain Figures.

R. McMurphy and M. O. Wilkins have done some figuring on the amount of money that would be raised for a monumental fountain in Eugene provided the endless chain project of the Women's Republican Patriotic League could be carried through to the end without a break.

Originally there were 15 numbers. Each number was to contribute 10 cents, and write three persons to each contribute 10 cents, each of those to respond, and extend the invitation to three others, and so on until the twentieth series was reached, when further notifications were to cease.

Messrs McMurphy and Wilkins found the amount that would be raised, provided no break occurred, would be $918,290.20.

LOGGING LIVELY.—A. C. Barbour, of the lower Sluslaw, is in the city. He informs us that logging is now lively on the Sluslaw and Wild Cat. Lyons Bros. are cutting a run of logs up the Wild Cat river, the first ones ever cut on that stream. Another crew is cutting logs above the mouth of Wild Cat on the main Sluslaw. Mr. Barbour is selling his first logs this year. The demand for logs is good, the mills at the mouth of the river wanting all they can obtain at fair prices.

INFORMATION FOR INS. CITY.—Information charging Wm. Freese, of Clatskanie, with insanity, has been filed with Judge Potter, and he will be given an examination next week. Several children belonging to Freese were taken from him a few weeks ago and sent to the Boys' & Girls' Aid Society at Portland.

GENERAL WOOD

Will Remain Governor of Cuba For the Present.

SALEM CITY ELECTION.

SPECIAL TO THE GUARD.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—General Wood will soon return to his governor of Cuba and a civil government has been firmly established. This is the result of a conference on the part of the executive and war departments. General Wood has been very successful in his work since the surrender of Santiago, and has done much for Cuba by his business-like methods.

CITY OF EUGENE.

She Will Hereafter Make Weekly Trips to This City.

HER OFFICERS, ETC.

The steamer, City of Eugene, arrived at her dock in the city this morning at 6:30 o'clock, having left Portland Wednesday forenoon, being her first trip this season. She spent the night just below the Battery. When she left Portland she had a full cargo, but she only arrived here with 161 tons for our merchants. One of the reasons for the light freight rate for Eugene was the insufficient notice of her starting up the river. Captain Gray says the channel of the river between here and Harrisburg is in good condition. The boat came up through the straits near Junction City and the hands were compelled to cut out a large cottonwood tree that extended across the river and held considerable drift. The Captain says that the trip from Harrisburg to Eugene is the quickest on record—less than six hours.

It is the intention of the boat to make weekly trips hereafter to Eugene and Captain Gray asks for a fair patronage from our business men.

The boat looks quite differently from what she did last fall. She has been repainted on the exterior and the upper deck has been extended 28 feet, a ladies cabin occupying the rear portion of the same.

The boat is officered as follows now: J. L. Smith, captain; Isaac Gray, Jr., chief engineer; Andrew Newbery, assistant engineer; Captain Isaac Gray Sr., purser; Jack Tait and Chas. Gilmore, firemen; Albert Sonn, mate; Lew Turner, steward; John H. Jones, a Second Oregon volunteer, watchman; and five deck hands.

The boat left down the river at 10 o'clock with a few tons of freight. She has a full load engaged at Harrisburg, Liverpool (Manroe landing) and Corvallis.

Guard Collector and Solicitor.

The steadily increasing patronage of the GUARD, in its subscription, advertising and job work departments, has made the employment of a collector and solicitor a necessity. Mr. F. L. Poindexter has been selected for this position and will begin his new duties December 1. Any courtesies or favors extended Mr. Poindexter will be appreciated by the publishers.

The GUARD claims an actual circulation of 624 for the Daily edition and 1650 for the Weekly, (the largest by a large percentage of any paper in Lane county), and will verify the same to any advertiser by giving access to our subscription books.

In the job work department new fashions of type of the latest styles are being received, and competent printers employed, insuring only first class work and complete satisfaction.

UNDER A SPELL.

It was late when George Atwood arrived at Mrs. Hallock's party. There was quite a brilliant company present, and Mr. Atwood stood near the door to scan the throng. Evidently he was looking for somebody—yes, for his eyes rested now on a young girl—a girl with a beautiful face appeared to a fair, handsome man, bending over the back of her chair. She seemed to be a trifle of a girl and wholly unconscious of anybody's presence in the brilliantly lighted parlor but the man bending over her.

And this girl was George Atwood's promised wife. When his eyes rested on her, an awful change came over his face. The rich, dark color fled, leaving it white and rigid, and his lips formed a tense line under his heavy, dark-lashed eyes.

For days George Atwood had watched Ida Challa, his intended wife. He knew that she loved him devotedly, and he tried not to watch her. He tried not to notice Alfred May's attention to her, but as he caught sight of her face when he entered Mrs. Hallock's parlor he knew that Alfred May possessed the fascination of a serpent, and he had drawn Ida into the meshes.

George Atwood turned away with an inward groan. He loved Ida passionately. Her love seemed lost to him, yet he could not think of giving her up.

"Mr. Atwood is here," Alfred May said, looking down at Ida Challa.

The radiant face grew pale, and Ida shivered as she looked around her. She had fallen from her world of bliss, and she was once more in Mrs. Hallock's crowded salon.

"Did you say Mr. Atwood was here? Where is he?" she asked in a low voice.

"Yes, he was here a moment ago. I saw him looking savagely in this direction, but he has disappeared. I do not see him anywhere now." And Mr. May laughed his merrily laugh, changed the conversation and in another minute Ida's face was as radiant and rosy once more.

A quadrille was forming, and a gentleman came to claim Ida for the dance. Away from Alfred May, and the glamour of his presence cast over her partly vanished. She thought of her lover. Where was he? Did he notice anything wrong in her conduct toward Alfred May? If he was in the room, why didn't he come to her?

These thoughts dashed through Ida's mind as she waited for the first figure to be called, and, happening to turn her head, she saw her lover standing on the opposite side of the room, his eyes fastened upon her. One glance at his livid face, and everything in the illuminated parlor seemed whirling round her.

The dance was over. Ida never could tell how she got through it. The heat of the room was suffocating her, and when her partner left her, after leading her back to her seat, she rose and staggered over to one of the windows that opened out upon the balcony.

As she stepped into the deep recess of the window she let the curtains fall behind her, shutting in the light and heat and what? How delightful and cool it was out here! The shining stars looked down at her from their deep, blue setting through the open window. But Ida did not shut herself out to the darkness to gaze at the stars. She threw herself into a chair which occupied the recess and buried her face in her hands.

"Oh, what a wretch I am!" she moaned. "George suspects I think more of another than I do of him. Heaven help me! How is this going to end?"

Little Ida dreamed that before many minutes she would know how it was going to end. As she asked herself that question voices came to her from the balcony without.

Ida's head was erect in an instant. A lady and gentleman were speaking on the balcony. Ida did not wish to sit and listen to what was not intended for her ears, but the man's voice held her spell-bound, and she leaned forward to catch every word that fell from his lips.

"What absurd ideas, to be sure!" the man was saying in his lightest tones. "Abundant! How can you say so?" said the lady's voice hotly. "Anybody can see that you are trying to come between George Atwood and his intended wife."

"Trying to come between them?" And Alfred May laughed derisively.

"Ah, you mean that you have already accomplished it! Yes, everybody says that you must have fascinated Miss Challa. That she loves you is no longer a secret."

"She loves me! Then more fool she for her pains, for, my dear, I have no affection to waste on anybody but your own sweet self."

Ida listened to no more. For days she had been under a spell, but it was shattered at last. She fell back in her chair, buried her hands once more and groaned aloud.

At that moment the heavy curtains parted, and George Atwood stepped into the recess.

"Ida, what ails you?" And he rested his hand lightly on her shoulder.

"Oh, don't touch me! Don't speak to me!" she cried, drawing away from him, with a shiver. "George, I'm not worthy a kind word from your lips."

"Heaven forbid, Ida, that a word should fall from my lips but in kindness to you. It is too late to ensure"—and the strong man's voice quavered. "It is so hard to give you up. If Alfred May were a good man!"

"Alfred May is a scoundrel, and I hate him! I hate myself! Oh, George, if you knew how wretched I am!" And Ida burst into tears.

"Ida!" cried George in joyful astonishment. "What has you loved Alfred May?"

"George, I've acted foolishly. I've done wrong. But, oh, I'm so sorry!" said Ida between her sobs.

"My darling!" And George clasped her in his strong arms. "Let us forget the past few weeks of our existence."—New York News.

Royalty at Niagara.

A Cincinnati young woman who visited Niagara falls had the pleasure of looking over the registry book at the Cave of the Winds just after she had made the trip beneath the falls herself. There were inscribed the names of lords and dukes, high caste Brahmins, people from Constantinople, tourists from Japan, etc. One of the most interesting signatures was that of Prince George, who will soon be king of England. He had simply signed his name "George," with her majesty's ship—Sept. 27, 1887. He had evidently enjoyed the trip through the Cave of the Winds and beneath the shower of old Niagara, for he immediately descended and went through for the second time, as is shown by the fact that his name appears with those of his suit farther down on the same page of that date of the registry book.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
