The Jackal's Prayer. A Hottentot Fable.

BY JOEL BENTON A chicken wandering far and wide, Soon saw a jackal at its side .-And though, for safety, help was sought, The silly saunterer was caught.

Then said the chicken to the beast: "Prayer always comes before a feast; The white man doth some grace repeat Before each meal-or will not eat."

"I should not, friend, object to pray If I knew how, Show me the way." The chicken said: "Now understand-When you begin, fold hand with hand." The jackal followed out with care This brief advice, and offered prayer. Then spoke his guide: "Your words are right But prayers of faith and not of sight; We bow our heads unto the ground, Nor look above, nor gaze around .-And so, if you are good and wise, You'll pray once more and close your eyes So, doing as his prompter bade, The jackal shut his eyes and prayed;

A Wooing Not Long a Doing.

It is told that Abernethy, while attending a lady for several weeks, observed hose admirable qualities in her daughter which he truly esteemed to be calculated to render the marriage state happy. Accordingly, on Saturday, when taking leave of his patient, he addressed her to the following purport:--"You are now so well that I need not see you after Monday which, with a single individual as captain and crew, was hugging the dusky fringe of a marsh a half-mile away.

I picked up my pipe and ran down to my companions as I saw the little vessel ther prow in our direction, and got into my clothes as quickly as possible.

"Capital luck—capital luc amount to -, and I can settle my wife; my character is generally known to the public, so that you may readily as-certain what it is. I have seen in your daughter a tender and affectionate child and a gentle and lady-like member of a family; such a person must be all that a husband covets, and I offer my hand and fortune for her acceptance. On Monday, when I call, I shall expect your determination; for I really have no time for the routine of courtship." In this hu-mor the lady was wooed and won; and we believe we may add, the union was to the boy, and putting a hand on his head felicitous in every respect.
