Little Brook.

Sunny lawn and grassy meadow, Fairy lakelet glistening bright, Murmuring brook and slopes in meadow Steal upon the charmed sight.

Here the ripening clusters gather, There the russet apples fall, Bright parterres of gold and scarlet-Autumn sunlight over all!

Ah, how rich in peace and beauty, Thou sweet home of genius rare! Fame and faith and love and duty Find a resting ever here.

God be in thee, lovely homestead! God be with ye, gentle friends! In a home still brighter, sweeter, May we meet when this life ends! CLARA D. M'LEAN.

The Hills of Peace.

Far away in dim blue distance, There are hills of living green, And the sunlight on those hillsides Resteth with a smile serene; There, not time, nor chilling winter, Brings a touch of earth's decay; Ah! within this gloomy prison

For those hills I yearning pray. Gentle breezes wave the tree tops, Wakening music sweet and low; Crystal brooks and plashing fountains Swell the faint harmonious flow; Flowers, in tints of cloud-like softness, All the air with fragrance fill-All things whisper, care benumbing,

Restless mortal! Peace, be still! There, the depths of souls poetic Find expression here denied; There, the artist sees his pencil With the hues of sunset dyed; There, vague strains of hidden music Rise to melody divine-Golden fruits of hope's fulfilling,

Shall but longings e'er be mine? Dreamer, wake! no longer languish; Let thy prayer in action rise; Through thine own immortal spirit

See! a path before thee lies; And a guide of radiant beauty Leads thee on to thy release: Faithful, follow thine Ideal-Thou wilt reach the Hills of Peace.
