[The beautiful thought that "the graves of little children are the foot-prints of Angels," may truly suggest a sweet consolation to the saddened hearts of the bereaved. A little lump of unupheaved earth may be the only sign to the thoughtless world that the little one came and went; yet it is an Angel foot-step, and the fond parents felt a heavy tread upon their hearts, that will only be erased when they meet it on the shining shore beyond the River. However grief-stricken the heart may be in yearning over these Angel foot-prints, the heavenly consolation of the good Jesus takes all sadness out of them, and gives them a true, resigned import; as he says—"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."—R.]
