

The Democratic Times.

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 13, 1873.

THE LAZY MAN.

The lazy man is nearly always good natured. He never flies into a passion. He might crawl into one, if that were possible, but the idea of his flying into anything is preposterous.

Who ever heard of a lazy man breaking into a bank, where a crowbar had to be used, or drilling into a safe? Nobody. Not that he might not covet his neighbor's goods therein contained, but his horror of handling crowbars and drills would always deter him from actually committing burglary. He never runs away with his neighbor's wife, simply on account of the horror he has of running. If he is ever known to run it is run to seed.

He rarely lies about his neighbors, for it would be too much exertion, but he can lie about a bar-room all day.

He is of inestimable service to a billiard saloon, keeping the chairs warm and watching the game, for few would care to play where there are no spectators. The fact that he does this without pay, day in and day out, shows the unselfishness of his nature. What an industrious man, who considers his time worth something would want pay for, the lazy man generally does for nothing, showing a freedom from mercenary motives that should go far to his credit.

The lazy man never gets up revolutions, instructions, or popular excitements, and don't make a nuisance of himself by tramping around the country making incendiary speeches to promote public discontent.

In his own neighborhood he is never a busy-body in other people's affairs, for the very idea of being a busy-body at anything would drive him out of his head. By the way, if he ever got out of his head, you would have to drive him out, for he wouldn't have the energy to go out on his own accord.

No lazy man ever ran mad. If he went crazy it was because he couldn't go anywhere without walking.

Lazy men don't disturb the quiet of peaceful neighbors by putting up factories, furnaces and such abominations.

Finally, lazy men don't get up baseball clubs, which, if nothing else could be said in their favor, ought, in these days of excessive base bowling, to entitle them to public gratitude.

Premiums for Wild Animals.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the State Agricultural Society, in January, 1873, the following premiums were offered:

Resolved, That $100 be offered in premiums for the scalps of panthers, wolves, (or coyote), gophers, squirrels and Jay-birds, to be divided as follows:

A premium of $50 to the person producing the highest number, not less than 1,000; and to the person producing the next highest number, not less than 500, $25; and to the person producing the next largest number, not less than 250, $10; and to the person producing the next largest number, not less than 100, $5; and to the person producing the next largest number, not less than 75, $2 50; and to the person producing the next largest number, not less than 50, $1 50; and the next six numbers, $1 00 each.

One panther to be equal to 50 squirrels.

NOTE.—The one producing the scalps to furnish the Committee appointed to examine the same, a satisfactory statement in writing, that the animals from which the scalps were taken were killed by him within the time, from January 15, 1873, to October 15, 1873.

A Man with Green Hair.

A gentleman went into a San Francisco barber shop recently for the purpose of getting shaved. During the course of this operation the barber, like the rest of his kind, over on the alert for a stray quarter, made the timely discovery that his locks were turning gray, and at once suggested that an invigorator and a little dyeing would rejuvenate them beyond recognition. The gentleman, after a look in the mirror, became satisfied that this was really the case, and finally consented to undergo this process. The dye was vigorously applied, and in a short time the half hoary locks were transformed into a luxuriant chestnut brown. The barber was highly elated at the success of his efforts, and promptly applied a liquid generally used in the dyeing process for the joint purpose of taking off the superfluous dye and making the color fast. But unfortunately he rubbed the contents of an acid bottle which had accidentally been placed on the stand, and turned the "chestnut clusters" into an ugly mottled green. The gentleman was ferociously indignant at the mistake, and requested him to shave his entire cranium, but upon being told that he would have to wear a wig for some time, concluded not to have it done. Several weeks will elapse before his hair will regain its natural color again.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.
2. If any subscribers order the discontinuance of their newspapers, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspapers from the office to which they are directed, the law holds them responsible until they have settled the bills, and order them discontinued.
4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publisher, and the newspapers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers from the office, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
6. The postmaster who neglects to give legal notice of the neglect of a person to take from the office the newspaper addressed to him, is liable to the publisher for the subscription price.
