The upshot of the Senatorial investigation will be the complete vindication of Senator Grover on the libelous charges made against him and the utter discomfiture of the Federal brigade that conceived them. And, should justice be done, Stiles and several of his perjured compatriots will do the State service in the Penitentiary. Mosier, Butler, Goodman and others have given their testimony, completely setting at rest the slanders fulminated against Mr. Grover and themselves. The tables have been turned and the persecution of an honorable man has recoiled on the instigators. Mitchipple and his Custom House flunkies are exposed in the attempt to make easy his return to the seat he surreptitiously holds by promulgating charges against Mr. Grover which he himself should answer to and would quail before. It is apparent that it is a panic, such as notoriously reigns in Constantinople itself. Unless the Turks fight a great successful battle within the coming week, their fate must depend entirely upon one great open field battle south of the Balkan Mountains. But this will probably be delayed some weeks until the Russians can build the proposed railroad from Sistova to Tiernova, and bring over it the vast store of supplies needed for the starving people of the invaded territory, as well as the army itself. The Turks themcharacterized by perjury, subornation selves are on the verge of starvation, and degradation which only they so there is none of the enemy's country would be guilty of. Higby, the chief manager of the affidavit business, has
