

JACKSONVILLE, July 6, 1879. Eminent Standard.—Your hybrid cotemporary, the Oregonian, seems of late to be afflicted with a severe bilious attack. The amount of foul matter expelled from its capacious bowels is wonderful in quantity as it is disgusting in quality. The remedies you have tried in its case seem sufficiently radical to effect a cure, but the people are pained to note no favorable change. May it not be just possible that you have failed to diagnose his malady correctly? There is no doubt but that he is afflicted with all the moral ailments you have detected, but his is a fearfully complicated case which has been recently aggravated by the patient being forced to swallow a vast amount of his own disorgagements. You have doubtless for some weeks past, noticed that the Oregonian has had nothing to say in denunciation of ex-Senator Mitchell. Indeed, it has on more than one occasion referred to him in the most obsequious manner as "Oregon's Senator," whose influence secured the appropriation for the Harbor of Refuge, etc. A letter from your city to a gentleman here explains that change. Soon after Mr. Mitchell returned from Washington it was rumored that a mammoth Republican organ was to be started in Portland, backed by the capital of Jay Gould, and to run in harmony with the N. Y. Tribune, now owned by that gentleman. Of course such a paper would have been the friend of Mitchell and the rival of the Oregonian. True to its mercenary instincts, that journal tacked in its course and began to make overtures to the ex-Senator to ward off the anticipated calamity of meeting a rival able to measure financial swords with it. An ambassador, in the person of a superannuated political hack who has outlived his usefulness in the more honorable pursuits of manhood, was employed to approach Mitchell with propositions for a compromise. At first, this tool of the monopoly organ was indignantly repulsed, and it was not until the editor-in-chief went in person and through the intercession of your newly elected Mayor, a reconciliation was effected. It is said that the editor, when permitted to do so, grasped the ex-Senator's hand and blubbered right out. It was agreed that no new paper should be started with Mr. Mitchell's consent so long as the Oregonian remained true to its new master. This was just before the late Republican City Convention and the effect of the compromise was the nomination and election of one of the parties to the Mayoralty, while the remainder of the ticket was badly beaten. Mitchell and his friend were, doubtless, true to their pledges, while the Oregonian and its friends, with their usual duplicity, went back on their promises, at the polls, thus placing their candidate for U. S. Senator in the highest official position in the gift of the people of Portland, and giving the police force to the Democrats. This reverses the old adage, and as paradoxical as it may seem, proves that when rogues compromise honest men sometimes get their due. The Republicans here deny the facts above stated, but I presume that you can find evidence in Portland to prove all that I have written, correct.

SPEND YOUR MONEY AT HOME.—It is your home; you cannot improve it much by taking away your money to spend or invest. Spend your money at home, because, when it is necessary for you to get credit, it is of your own merchants you have to get it, and they must wait for the money. Therefore, when you have the money, spend it at home. Spend your money at home. It will make better business for our merchants; they can and will keep better assortments and sell at lower rates than if the only business they can do is to be charged on the books, while the money goes to other places. And, not least, take your home paper, and pay for it.

PROVERBS CONCERNING NOSES.—We have no fewer than fourteen English proverbs relating to this important feature of the human face divine: 1. Follow your nose. 2. He cannot see beyond his nose. 3. An inch is a good deal on a man's nose. 4. He would bite his own nose off to spite his face. 5. He has a nose of noses. 6. As plain as the nose on your face. 7. To hold one's nose to the grindstone. 8. To lead one by the nose. 9. To put one's nose out of joint. 10. To pay through the nose. 11. To have a good nose for a poor man's sow. 12. To trust one's nose to other people's business. 13. A nose that can smell a rat. 14. Every man's nose will not make a shoeing horn.

MISTAKEN KINDNESS TO HORSES.—Many drivers water their horses on the road as often as opportunity offers. The horse finally wants no more, but the driver wishes to make the water useful to the animal, and pours it on his legs "in order to cool his feet." But what is the result of such sudden cooling and wetting? The horse will be attacked with rheumatic pains and his thighs will very soon become stiff. In consequence whereof, instead of a refreshment the animal has received a torture, all done with good intentions.

FORTUNE'S FREAKS.—J. Dougherty, who was some time ago pardoned out of the penitentiary, has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., to look after an estate valued at $50,000, on which he is said to have a very considerable claim. Messrs. John M. Goarin and Henry Gilroy are his attorneys in the case, and say that while the young man may not get any of the money in question he still has a valid claim and is undoubtedly entitled to a generous share.—Standard.

THE WOOL HOUSE, CONE & WELTON, In Red Bluff, Cal.

For more than you can realize by shipping to San Francisco. We have bought Three Hundred Thousand bales this year this season and want Three Hundred Thousand more if we can get them. Don't fail to see us before you sell, and we will either buy your wool or see that you get more for it than it is worth in San Francisco.

OUR WOOL PRESSES are turning out 100 compressed bales daily, and it takes wool to keep them going; so bring along your clips and get a good price for them, and help yourselves, and by so doing help us to keep the ball rolling and presses going. It is wonderful in its conception, unprecedented for doing a large range of sewing in textile fabrics and leather. Its motions are continuous, admitting of an extraordinary rate of speed, either by steam or foot power. Every motion of the treadle makes six stitches, thus producing about one-third more work in a day than other Sewing Machines. It has no stop motions, and tightens the stitch with the needle out of the fabric. It uses the well-known Wilson Compound Feed on both sides of the needle. It has two-thirds less parts than any other first-class Sewing Machine. Its arm is fully eight and one-half inches long and five and one-half inches high, and the whole Machine is very compactly and scientifically constructed in proportions, elegance, design and appearance.
