Williamson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, for the last fiscal year shows that there were surveyed 15,699,253 acres of public land, and 652,151 acres of private land claims. This is an increase of 725,347 acres over the amount surveyed during the preceding year.

JACKSONVILLE'S IMPROVEMENTS FOR ONE YEAR.

The Presidential excitement being over, would it not be well for us to examine into the progress we have made in the year now nearing its close? The writer took unto himself the pleasant task of inquiring into the various buildings that have been erected and the improvements to others and the probable cost of each.

Commencing at our new Steam Flouring Mill, we have one of the finest structures of the kind on the Pacific coast, substantially built of the best material, under most experienced mechanics, Messrs. Hammond and Wimer. It is three stories in height, with a solid stone foundation, the machinery is of the latest and most improved pattern, is capable of manufacturing the finest quality of flour; there are two runs of burrs in the mill. One of the proprietors, Mr. Foudray, informed the writer that if needed they can grind into flour all of the surplus wheat that is grown in Rogue River valley, and I believe it. For instance, one day recently they manufactured in one hour 1,100 lbs. of splendid flour. Taking this as a basis, allowing the mill to run night and day, we have a grinding capacity of 150,000 bushels of wheat per annum, which my readers can readily see would manufacture into flour all of the surplus wheat our farmers can raise. The proprietors, Foudray & McKenzie, are thorough mill men and have expended a great deal of money in the building of the flouring mill, we understand $11,000, and I think we speak the sentiment of the people when we say they deserve our patronage. It is to be hoped that every well-wisher of our town will see they are patronized, they being worthy of it.

In leaving the mill and coming down Third street we see four dwellings recently erected, one by Mr. Kane, two by Mr. McMahon, and one by Mr. Lathrop. Mr Kane occupying his as a residence, Mr. McMahon renting his two at, we are informed, a fair rental, and Mr. Lathrop occupying his as a dwelling for himself and family. The buildings, we learn, cost ing about $1,200.

Still following Third street, until we come to California street, on the corner of Third and California we find the New State hotel and saloon, owned and occupied by C. W. Savage, to have been entirely renovated. The part of the building fronting on Third street has been sided and some new windows inserted; on California street a new front and awning has been built. With the repainting and reshingling we estimate Mr. Savage has fully expended $800, and we presume Mr S. will retain his former reputation as a genial, whole-souled Boniface.

Next door to the New State Hotel we find Mr. Howard with his beautiful Bazaar, as he calls it; but really he has worked wonders. One can hardly imagine he could make such a change out of the old butcher-shop and baker-shop; yet he has done it at a cost, we judge, of $800, and Howard says he will sell goods cheaper than anybody for cash. Give him a call, for he is not such a bad fellow.

We still walk along California street, towards Oregon, and find John Miller with his large and improved store looking really nice for our little town, he having taken out the partition dividing him from Mr. Howard's old stand, and has fitted up the inside in good shape with shelving, drawers, cases, etc., at a cost, we think, of $300.

Crossing Oregon street and going towards Mr. Schutz' brewery, we find Jas. P. McDaniel's nice new residence, artistically built and neatly painted, we presume, at a cost to Mr. McD. of $600.

Leaving Mr. McDaniel and walking down California street, we pass N. Fisher's residence. Mr. F. has within the year made some additions to his residence and other needed improvements at a cost, we think, of $500.

In passing along California street we find C. Coleman's with a new front, which sets off his store building wonderfully. The front was something Mr. C. needed and we presume it must have cost him, with other alterations, $300.

On the same block with Mr. C. we find the fine new brick drug store, lately erected by C. W. Kahler at a cost, we are informed, of $2,000. We must admire Mr. Kahler for the pains he has taken in making the drug store such a nice building. It is now occupied by Kahler & Bro., who will dispense to the public all articles in their line at low rates.

On the adjoining block, as we walk eastwardly, we see our new Grand Hotel and Hall, owned by Geo. and Jane Holt. We hear it will be occupied by the Madame in person, when we believe all the delicacies of the season will be dispensed to her guests in the latest style and at fair prices. In noticing the hotel and hall, it would hardly be right to pass it by without giving a short sketch of the manner in which it was built. Geo. Holt, owner and builder, started from the bedrock, as we call it, quarrying the stone for the foundation, making the brick, burning the lime, cutting the stone for sills, doors, windows, etc., and then laying each of these in their proper places, finally plastering the building throughout. We think, from information furnished, the hotel when completed will cost $12,000, and we believe the equal of Mr. Holt for industry and perseverance is not in the State of Oregon. Were we blessed with more like him we would have a different town and valley.

On the same block with the hotel, Mr. Cardwell has built a very neat one-story frame building, a portion of the front being occupied by Mrs. I. W. Berry as a millinery store, Mr. Cardwell using the balance as a residence for himself and family. The building complete cost $1,500.

We are yet on California street and walk east a few blocks, when we come to the nice new church edifice being built by the Presbyterians of Jacksonville for them to worship in. It is quite a model of architectural beauty, and for finish we think has no superior in the State. It is of two stories in height, with a beautiful belfry. The bell, we learn, costing in San Francisco $500, is of fine manufacture with a splendid tone; on a clear morning we think the ringing of the bell can be heard six or seven miles. David Linn, the builder, has done a remarkably good job in the erection of the church, and we must say it is a credit to our town to have such an edifice. We learn when finished the church will cost in the neighborhood of $5,000.

Across the street and a little further east we find T. G. Reames building an addition to his dwelling. When finished, we are informed, it will cost $1,000; contractors, Messrs. Smith & Finfrock.

Leaving California street, we go towards the school-house, and find a large and commodious two-story dwelling house recently erected by Robt. Kahler for occupancy by himself, at a cost we learn of $1,500; builder, Geo. Brown.

Passing still north of Mr. Kahler's and walking down the Valley road, we find Prof. Merritt with a nice two-story frame dwelling house, erected within the last month and costing him, we should think, $600 when completed; builder George Brown.

We retrace our steps, and crossing Jackson creek towards Wm. Bybee's, we meet the ponderous two-story frame rustic dwelling-house about being completed for James R. Neil, ex-District Attorney. Mr. Neil when occupying his new residence will have a beautiful view of our valley and surroundings. The dwelling is certainly a very fine one and shows a spirit of improvement in Mr. Neil. The cost, when completed, we believe cannot be less than $1,500; builder D. Linn.

Leaving Mr. Neil we return along Oregon street until we come to our new town hall, now in course of erection. When completed it will make a neat and very creditable appearance. It is of brick, one story in height, having a frontage of 25 feet on Main street and running back on Oregon street 75 feet, with an "L" in the rear, the building nearly covering the plot of ground owned by the town, and is divided as follows: Truck room in the rear; adjoining is the calaboose of two cells, solidly constructed. We would rather not be confined therein—that is for any length of time. The front portion will be used by the Trustees for their meetings. The Recorder also has his office there. When finished, not including the lot, will cost $2,500; builder, David Linn. Should the finances of the town justify it, at an early date the Trustees will add an additional story for public purposes.

We are on Oregon street and walk south until we meet the Applegate road, when we find the small but neat dwelling-house of F. Kashafer, built at a cost to him, we hear, of $300.

In summing up the approximate costs of improvements and their number, we have fifteen new buildings, with improvements to others, costing in all betweeen forty and fifty thousand dollars, and believe our estimates are not overdrawn. With various charitable and other purposes, we have the following, viz:

Subsidy to Flouring Mill	$2,500
Contemplated C. C. W. R.	2,000
To Presbyterian Church	2,500
Irish Relief Fund	500
Other Donations	1,000
Total	$9,500

Add this to our regular taxes, State, county, municipal, road, special, school levy and the tax to build the town hall, 3¼ mills (we have taken $300,000 as a basis to work upon) including donations as stated, $20,000 was contributed by the town of Jacksonville for the year 1880; with costs of new buildings and improvements, say $45,000, we have expended $65,300. We frequently hear it remarked that we are not imbued with the right spirit of progress; but I think we can confidently say of our town's people for the year 1880, as regards material prosperity of the town and a munificent liberality and generosity, is unsurpassed. Our superiors are not in the State of Oregon.

Jacksonville, Nov. 19, 1880.

FROM ARIZONA.—H. J. Diggles was in town Sunday, having lately returned from a trip into Arizona and Mexico. He visited Tombstone, Arizona, where he saw the Schieffelin Brothers, formerly of Oregon, who own the richest mines in that place, and also Farish, formerly superintendent of the Black Bear mine in this county, now principal owner and superintendent of the Head Center mine at Tombstone. The origin of the name Tombstone comes from one of the Schieffelins being requested to prospect for a mine, and in doing so said he would be as likely to find a tombstone as a mine in that locality. He found a mine, however, and called it the Tombstone, which proved very rich, causing a settlement to grow up, added by other rich discoveries. Mr. Diggles also visited the Tucson section, and where J. K. Luttrell has bonded mines with good success, besides taking a trip down into the State of Sonora, in the Mexican Confederation. During his visit at Tombstone, he witnessed a rousing political meeting, an unusual thing in that country, which shows that the new immigration on our southern borders has been largely patriotic during the past year or two. All through Sonora, Americans are bonding and working extensive and rich mines, and daily lines of stages are running with two wheel horses and four leaders abreast, requiring one man to drive and another to whip the animals, the stages being similar to those used on the O. & C. Stage Line. Arizona, New Mexico and Northern Mexico are fast filling up by immigration from the East and the Pacific States, and the railroads into Mexico proposed by Gen. Grant cannot fail to prove highly beneficial to the prosperity of the United States.—Freka Journal.

THE pedestrians seem determined to wipe out the best records with the same regularity as the turf thoroughbred. La London Rowell captured the Astley belt, making a score of 566 miles in six days. He beat the negro boy Hart's record by one mile. This places Rowell at the head of the long distance walkers of the world. Anyone who has seen him walk would be willing to back him liberally. His dog-trot which carries him around the track with little effort, his superb digestive apparatus, which works like a machine at the end of a long walk, and his ability to make long runs and pile up a big score at the outset, are points in his favor, which no length of limb or amount of brawn in a rival can overcome. The little Englishman signalized this race by making a remarkable run of fifty miles on a stretch.

WE believe in beautifying the home within, as well as without. We would see every home so attractive with books, and music, and pictures, that the young shall be glad to remain in it, and the old shall find it a delightful abode of peace.
