MEDICAL.

VITIATED BLOOD
Scrofulous, Inherited and Contagious Humors Cured by Cuticura.

THROUGH the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of blood poisoning, in connection with erysipelas that I have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our county. I take great pleasure in forwarding to you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your CUTICURA REMEDIES a trial.
P. S. WHITLINGER, Leechburg, Pa.
Reference: FRANK T. WRAY, Druggist, Apollo, Pa.

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.
James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says: "In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them, and was perfectly cured."
Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

ONE OF THE WORST CASES.
We have been selling your CUTICURA REMEDIES for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a customer. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP. The soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.
TAYLOR & TAYLOR, Drugs.' Frankfort, Kan.

SCROFULOUS, INHERITED,
And Contagious Humors, with Loss of Hair and Eruptions of the Skin, are positively cured by CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and Cuticura Resolvent internally, when all others fail. Send for Pamphlet.

DRUGGISTS USE THEM.
We have obtained satisfactory results from the use of the Cuticura Remedies in our own family, and recommend them beyond any other remedies for diseases of the skin and blood. The demand for them grows as their merits become known
McMILLIN & CO., Druggists, Latrobe, Pa.

CUTICURA REMEDIES
Are sold everywhere. Price: Cuticura, the Great Skin Cure, 50 cts.; Cuticura Soap, an Exquisite Beautifier, 25 cts; Cuticura Resolvent, the New Blood Purifier, $1 00. Potter Drug and Chemical Co., Boston.

PIMPLES, Blackheads, Skin Blemishes, and Baby Humors, use Cuticura Soap.

Choking Catarrh.
Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life-breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed the languor and debility that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? What a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind, clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange noises! How difficult it is to rid the nasal passages, throat and lungs of this poisonous mucus all can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs, liver and kidneys, all physicians will admit. It is a terrible disease, and cries out for relief and cure.
The remarkable curative powers, when all other remedies utterly fail, of Sandford's Radical Cure, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.
Each packet contains one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box of Catarrhal Solvent, and an improved Inhaler, with treatise and directions, and is sold by all druggists for $1.
Potter Drug & Chemical Co., Boston.

IT STOPS THE PAIN
IN ONE MINUTE.
Aching backs, hips, and sides, kidney and uterine pains, weakness and inflammation, rheumatic, neuralgic, sciatic, sudden, sharp and nervous pains and strains relieved in one minute by that new, elegant and infallible antidote to pain and inflammation, the Cuticura Anti-Pain Plaster. 25 cents; 5 for $1; at all druggists, or Potter Drug & Chemical Co., Boston.

To Regulate
THIS FAVORITE HOME REMEDY is warranted not to contain a single particle of Mercury or any injurious substance, but is purely vegetable.
It will Cure all Diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver, Kidneys and Stomach.
If your Liver is out of order, then your whole system is deranged. The blood is impure, the breath offensive; you have headache, feel languid, dispirited and nervous. To prevent a more serious condition, take at once Simmons
LIVER REGULATOR. If you lead a sedentary life, or suffer with Kidney Affections, avoid stimulants and take Simmons Liver Regulator. Sure to relieve.
If you have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will feel relieved and sleep pleasantly.
If you are a miserable sufferer with Constipation, Dyspepsia and Biliousness, seek relief at once in Simmons Liver Regulator. It does not require continual dosing, and costs but a trifle. It will cure you.
If you wake up in the morning with a bitter, bad taste in your mouth,
TAKE Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the Bilious Stomach, sweetens the Breath, and cleanses the Furred Tongue. Children often need some safe Cathartic and Tonic to avert approaching sickness. Simmons Liver Regulator will relieve Colic, Headache, Sick Stomach, Indigestion, Dysentery, and the Complaints incident to Childhood.
At any time you feel your system needs cleansing, toning, regulating without violent purging, or stimulating without intoxicating, take
Simmons Liver Regulator

YAQUINA.

So much has been said of this place that a brief description of it, its surroundings and advantages will not be unwelcome to most of our readers.

A ride of about five hours from Albany in the well-finished cars of the Oregon Pacific brings one to the terminus of the road, Yaquina city. After crossing the Willametie at Albany the road traverses the almost level valley over beautiful fields of growing and harvested grain to Corvallis, where the west side division of the O. & C. is crossed. Not much of the town can be seen from the cars, as many trees are well grown. From the little seen it appears a well-built, clean town, and although the people are represented as money-makers they are evidently home makers as well, which largely condones the former fault, if fault it be. To the right of the track just after passing the depot may be seen the site of the new agricultural college, the cornerstone of which was laid recently.

Soon after leaving Corvallis the foothills are reached. These are partially cleared, and on every hand may be seen fine fields and good buildings. On the thousand hills, on a clear day, may be seen not only the cattle, but man and the fruits of his toil. It may not be so pleasant to work upon a hilly farm as upon a level tract—indeed it is quite probable that distance lends enchantment to the view; but be that as it may, viewed from a car window the farms of Polk and Benton counties present a view most fair.

The Mary's river, which forms the key or pass to the Coast Range on the east side of the mountains, is crossed and recrossed many times among the foothills and on the mountain's side. Once the actual ascent is begun there is no let up, or rather down, till the summit is reached. Winding in and about turns that the snake could hardly make, with the track as viewed from the rear platform, now much higher on one side and now the other as the curves demanded, the mountain is climbed with what is really an easy grade, viz: 119 feet to the mile.

Occasionally a ranch is seen, and a small plat is gathered and less carefully stored, if we may judge from the buildings. Timber there is none except at long intervals. The mountains and many of the foothills are covered with dead stumps and some young growth. Fires were running among these in various places as we passed. What looks most strange is the vast amount of dead timber standing on the hills, killed by a terrific fire which raged many years ago.

The road down the west decline is along the Yaquina river, only it is hard to tell whether river or road is most crooked. Three tunnels, all short ones, are passed through.

About 15 miles back from the ocean its action is noted on the lands, which are said to be very rich and unsurpassed for vegetables; but we saw nothing in the fields and gardens passed to indicate that they are one-half as fertile as an Illinois prairie. Neither did the California vegetables of all descriptions make good the claim of great richness. As for houses and farm appliances, we are not permitted to say that they indicated too much prosperity.

Yaquina city, the terminus of the railroad is situated six miles from the bar or entrance to the harbor on the north side of the river. It is a railroad town, the land upon which it is built, as well as the land for seven miles above and below, is owned by the Oregon Pacific, who give a nominal lease in order that they may take possession at any time if they desire. West of the town is a tract 600 feet wide and half a mile long still overflowed at high tide, which has been diked off. This is being filled by the use of dump carts. Just west is 1000 acres of mud flats to which the railroad has secured a title, and which it is their intention to reclaim and use for the town-site. The channel along this tract and in front of the town proper is said to be 1260 feet wide in its narrowest place and from 25 to 30 feet deep at low tide. The town itself probably contains 250 inhabitants, who exhibit a fair degree of activity in business. They seem to expect that the place is speedily to become a second New York. Portland is a mere hamlet compared with their expectations and talk. That this will at no far distant future day become a place of considerable importance cannot be doubted, when it is considered that the Oregon Pacific, evidently backed by some transcontinental line (the Chicago and Northwestern), is directing all the trade possible to its shores. The company's boats loading here are models of neatness, and the route thus afforded for freight and passengers is both quick and cheap as well as pleasant. Next week we will have something to say about Newport, at present the principal town on Yaquina bay.

THE following remarkable, though foolish and idiotic resolutions were addressed to President Cleveland, at Washington, by the Farmers' Alliance, of Floyd county, Indiana, at their meeting, last Saturday night:

"Resolved, That there is no promise, either expressed or implied, by which the people of the United States must pay their President $4000 per month, or any other sum, while electioneering for a second term of office. Therefore, we call upon President Cleveland, before starting on his pending electioneering tour through the West and South, to first write out his resignation and file it with the proper officials in Washington.

"Resolved, further, the president and secretary of this alliance are hereby instructed to foward a certified copy of these resolutions by registered letter to the President of the United States."

When men band together and get so foolish, as these resolutions lead us to believe, they should be gathered up by the proper authorities and thrust into an insane asylum, where their acts would conform with their surroundings.

THE British citizens in Portland on June 17th, on the occasion of the jubilee, sent an address to Queen Victoria. Of course it was written well and contained many expressions of good will. In reply the Queen, through her minister in Washington, dispatched her "sincere thanks," regulation kind, "to the British community in Oregon for their loyalty and attachment to her majesty's person. There is "form" in such a proceeding and that is about all, outside of a mild deceit. A great deal of time and a number of empty words and frivolous sentiment were wasted on both sides. Such ceremonies are cold-blooded in their nature and are perfectly loathsome and disgusting, on account of the dishonesty apparent, to some people.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Graphic Account of a Most Wonderful Occurrence.

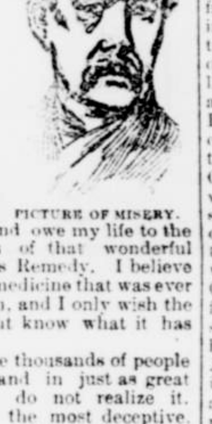
[Kingston Correspondence Boston Globe.]

An event has taken place in this city so remarkable in its nature that I venture to describe it in full. The principal in the affair is Mr. Jere Smith, son of Mr. Cornelius B. Smith, of the State Insurance Department at Albany, who is well known, stands very high and is in every way reliable. I have had a long and most interesting interview with him, which I transcribed and send you in his own words, trusting it may prove valuable to your readers:

"During last year," he said, "I could not understand what was the trouble with me. I had always felt strong and hearty, but I gradually became aware that something was undermining me. I first began to feel drowsy and then in a day or two I would be unnaturally wide awake. Strange pains would come in different parts of my body. My head did not ache much but it usually felt heavy. I was sometimes hungry and sometimes I hated food, while my sleep was very irregular. I could not understand what it meant, but thought it might pass away after a time; but it did not. I don't see how I could have been so blind, but I suppose I was like most people who are troubled in the same way, and thought it nothing dangerous. After a while I noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing; that they were dark at times and very light at others. Finally I began to gain flesh, but I knew it was unnatural and that I was bloating. This frightened me, and I consulted physicians, who were very kind in their attentions, but did not help me in the least. My father then went with me to New York, and we consulted the eminent Dr. Keyes, who treated me for several weeks. At that time my condition was horrible. I was bloated from head to foot, it was almost impossible to breathe, and I could not sleep. In several places on my body the skin burst open, so great was the pressure from within. The agony I endured was indescribable. Then the doctor told me my case was hopeless, that I had Bright's disease in its worst form, and that I had only a few day to live."

PICTURE OF HEALTH.

"Fortunately I had a friend who accompanied me and would not see me die without a struggle. He did not urge, he insisted on my making one more effort, and I did so. I noticed an improvement at once; in four days the swelling greatly decreased and the pain wholly ceased. I continued to improve, and am a well man to-day, and owe my life to the marvelous effects of that wonderful preparation, Hunt's Remedy. I believe this is the greatest medicine that was ever discovered by man, and I only wish the whole world might know what it has done for me."



PICTURE OF MISERY.

"I know there are thousands of people troubled as I was and in just as great danger, but they do not realize it. Bright's disease is the most deceptive, the most horrible malady the world has ever known. It has no settled symptoms, but assumes every imaginable form. I had no idea it was Bright's disease that was undermining me until I began to bloat, and now that I am well and enjoying life, I feel like telling everybody about my miraculous escape. Is it any wonder this town is aroused over my resurrection."

Such is the account of probably as narrow an escape from death as was ever known. The first symptoms which Mr. Smith felt were such as many others feel but do not consider worth noticing. It is plain, however, that the early indications of a dangerous disease cannot be trifled with, but must be met promptly, and by such a remedy as has been proven to be indeed a friend in time of need.
WINTHROP.

A NUISANCE.—The society young lady wants to begin her married life on the same scale that her parents are ending theirs. Declining to recognize any other possibility, she has never taken steps to learn anything about domestic duties, and is entirely ignorant of the way to make a dress or trim a bonnet. She employs the most expensive of trade-people, probably spends double what an English nobleman's daughter would do, and wastes more on ice-cream, candy and flowers than the entire income of a working-woman who has to maintain the appearance of a lady. If she goes to the theatre or opera she must have a carriage, a corsage bouquet, new gloves and a supper afterwards. None of her toilet must be seen too often, and she must be registered in the summer at some expensive resort, or go to Europe. Her parents pet and indulge her in every way, her bachelor friends adore her, and she receives almost as much worship as did a goddess in the days of Greece and Rome. Very probably she is pretty, highly educated, accomplished, bright and attractive—a delightful partner for a dance or flirtation, and very likely an excellent wife for an extremely rich man. But ask her to come down from the pedestal, to be the helpmate of a man of moderate means, to cut herself loose from the acquaintances that can only be kept up while she is wealthy, to share in his troubles and to rise or sink with him, and she will, most likely, politely and firmly refuse.

A PROMINENT FIGURE.—A New York special to the Examiner says: Henry Villard's re-appearance on Wall street as a conspicuous figure was a prominent subject of conversation yesterday. The eventful history of this remarkable man is a favorite theme on the street, and he is pointed out as a striking illustration of the recuperative power of some men of energetic natures. It is believed that he will mostly enter into the directories of the Oregon & Transcontinental and Oregon Railway & Navigation, and probably of the Northern Pacific, and it is not imposible that he may resume his position as president of the companies. Villard represents German capital amounting to millions of dollars, and a prominent broker said yesterday that he probably had larger command of ready capital than any other man on the street.

Give Them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat, nose, head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of it. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

SCOTT AND O'MEARA.

TWO OLD-TIMERS MEET—THEY MET, FOUGHT AND QUIT.

The Evening Democrat attempts to write up a reminiscence of James O'Meara and Harvey W. Scott. The editor of that paper was away down South when Scott and O'Meara first met in Oregon. James O'Meara is a fine writer; he is about the only Democratic editor of marked ability who ever invaded the State, except, perhaps, "Billy" Haley, who died young, at Albany, in 1866. O'Meara came to this State, then a territory, about 1855. He at once sprang into prominence because he had ability to do so; but he had a rival in the person of Asahel Bush of Salem, editor and publisher of the Oregon Statesman, at that time the Democratic bible of the Pacific Coast. The Democratic party of Oregon was at that time of such vast proportions that it didn't adhere, so to speak. There were but few Whigs here. There was John P. Gaines, Dave Logan, "Billy" Adams of the Oregon city Argus, Dr. McBride, Thos. J. Dryer, Dr. H. V. V. Johnson and a few others; but they were not numerous enough to be effective

IN A POLITICAL FIGHT.

Of course, the dominant party being so much in the ascendancy, could afford to fight within its own organization. So when O'Meara came up from California he and Bush at once locked horns. O'Meary swung off and he and Colonel James K. Kelley organized what they termed the National Democratic party. The Whigs, being so hopelessly in the minority, were prone to vote for anything to beat the Democrats. It was in 1858. O'Meara secured the nomination for State Printer on the "National" Democratic ticket, and Col. Kelley stood in for Congress on the same layout. Bush sailed in for State Printer on the "Regular" Democratic billet and L. F. Grover for Congress. Both of the latter were electde. The canvass was acrimonious. Bush was very personal in his writings and could turn his pen to all the epithets in his native vernacular. O'Meara was more inclined to use polished language, but his adversary at times drove him to the use of expletives which were, at times,

MORE FORCIBLE THAN ELEGANT.

It was during those years that California writers gave to those of this State the title of the "Oregon style," and it clings to them still, no matter what may be their literary excellence. In 1860, the Democracy again became a "house divided against itself" on the secession question. Stephen A. Douglas swung off on the Squatter Sovereignty theory, while the Breckenridge-Lane following held to the superannuated doctrine of State Sovereignty, which simply meant the right to secede. Mr. O'Meara adhered to the Breckenridge-Lane faction. The Douglas Democracy and the Republicans united and became the dominant party, leaving Mr. O'Meara and his friends far in the rear. This was during war times, when men's blood was at the boiling point. Of course the result of that internecine struggle wrought startling changes in the minds of some men, among whom was Mr. O'Meara. When Ben Holladay came to the State and concluded to own a newspaper, he established the Bulletin and employed Mr. O'Meara as chief editor. The paper went to wreck when its owner began descending the declivity of misfortune, over which he eventually plunged. With the surrender of Holladay his friends were compelled to disband, though Mr. O'Meara continued in the line of his profession, going to California where he has since been constantly engaged. He is here now to take editorial charge of the News. That he will make it readable it is useless to doubt, for he possesses the ability and ambition to do so. But it is not probable that any of his old fights will be recommenced, for there is no occasion for their renewal.—[Oregon Siftings, Rep.

THE directors of the different national banks of the country were much surprised at the call of the controller of the treasury for a report on August 1st, of their respective banks. It has not been usual, in former years, for a call to be made during the months of July and August. Bradstreet's paper says: "It has been stated that for nearly twenty years no report has been called for in July for a date later than the 1st, and that no report was ever called for in the month of August until last year, when the 27th was the date chosen. The report now called for is expected to be of value as showing how the banks are prepared to meet the pressure for funds to move the crops. The controller found, after he had been office some time, that there was, on the part of some banks, a tendency to negligence in the matter of making reports. He announced last year that he intended to enforce the law compelling reports, and that he would fine banks failing to transmit reports within the prescribed time. He has kept his promise in this respect, and without doubt his action will have the effect of inducing more care and promptness in the matter of reporting.

CERTIFICATE OF CHARACTER.—A document certifying to the good conduct of Harcrater, the man recently arrested in Southern Oregon and taken back to Illinois to answer the charge of murder alleged to have been committed some years ago, has been circulated about Astoria within the past few days for signatures. Harcrater at one time lived in this city, and is to have conducted himself peaceably and orderly. His wife sent the paper here, as she sent copies of it to other sections of the State where they had lived, intending to get all the signatures possible and then foward them with the hope of having some mitigating influence on the trial of her husband, to take place soon in Illinois. Quite a number in this city were acquainted with Harcrater and were able to witness his good behavior with their signatures to the document mentioned. The accused is said to have borne a good name up to the time of his killing fracas. It is alleged he killed his man in self-defence, and it may prove advantageous to him to show that he has lived a blameless life since then.—Astoria Transcript.

The following description of Jane L.'s famous heat at Santa Rosa is taken from last Sunday's S. F. Call: In the fourth heat the best time was made. The horses were tapped off with Stamboul leading. He soon took the pole, closing out Jane L. who was close behind. At the quarter Ewing was third, Valentine fourth. At the half the horses were strung out, giving Jane L. plenty of room, who was now closing the gap between her and Stamboul. Between the half and three-quarters there was some fine trotting, Jane L. pressing hard, but the horse kept gaining steadily. At the three quarters Stamboul led by two lengths, with Valentine third and Thapsin fourth. In the stretch Jane L. and Stamboul did some close work; the latter broke when twenty-five feet from the wire, passing the same half a length ahead of Jane L. on a gallop. The heat was awarded to Jane L. Ewing was third and Thapsin fourth. Time 2.19½.

Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit Positively Cured by Administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it; is absolutely harmless and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. It never fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. For full particulars, address Golden Specific Co., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

STILL THE OLD QUESTION.

Oregon is importing from California, potatoes, onions, butter, peaches, sweet potatoes, grapes, green corn, and cantaloupes. Great quantities of these products come in on every steamer. Nearly all these things, of her own production, Oregon ought to have now a great abundance on the market. But we shall probably be obliged to import from California throughout the year butter, onions and potatoes; and beans, canned vegetables and fruits, that we ought to produce for export, we shall continue to bring from that State for our own consumption; while bacon, hams, lard, canned beef, soup and much else, will keep coming from the East to us in carloads.

Through this continual demand on other States even for our food, our lethargy advertises itself and our State falls into discredit. It is natural enough for those upon whom we make continual demand for these products to suppose that we cannot produce them ourselves, or are we too lazy to undertake it. Californians point to the vast quantities of fruits and vegetables shipped by them to Oregon and say to immigrants who talk of coming here, "Oregon has neither soil nor climate; it doesn't produce anything; people there are obliged to buy their fruit and vegetables here; if you go there you'll starve."

A dealer in Portland, the other day, pointed to large quantity of musk melons in crates from California, saying: "In each crate are a dozen and a half of melons; they cost in San Francisco $1.32 a crate, packed as they are, crate and all. Our people in Oregon seem to think they can't afford to raise them for that price. But until they do we shall be compelled to order from California." Onions and potatoes in large quantities this dealer had also received by steamer. He said further that he supposed he would be obliged to bring them from California right along, and butter, too, since there was likely to be no adequate home supply.

It is evident that agricultural industry in Oregon needs awakening and re-organization. The old question is still unanswered—when are we going to produce our own food?

LIPPINCOTT'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE for September opens with a brilliant romance entitled "The Red Mountain Mines," by Lew Vanderpoole, author of "Runainah," etc., in which the pioneer life of California is painted with a firm and artistic hand. An article of great and timely interest, in view of the approaching Constitutional Centennial to be held in Philadelphia, is Moncure D. Conway's "A Suppressed Statesman." It deals with the life of Edmund Randolph, of Virginia, a name now almost unknown, to whom Mr. Conway insists that the initiation and ratification of the Constitution were especially due. The reader will be surprised to learn how important a personage Randolph was in his own day. He was a statesman, an orator, a political writer, philosophical thinker. At every stage in the development of our nationality his influence was paramount. "His criticisms of the Constitution partly anticipated those of Mill, Bagehot, Karl Blind, Louis Blanc, and other authors of Europe. Indeed, a number of works have recently appeared in our own country, in advocacy of organic reforms, whose writers seem unconscious that they are repeating points made by Randolph a hundred years ago." Genie Holtzmeyer (Mrs. Sidney Rosenfeldt) contributes an amusing bit of autobiography entitled "How an English Girl Sought to Make a Living." Frank Carpenter reports a conversation with the man who captured John Wilkes Booth. James Cummings writes of "Social Life at John Hopkins' University." The poems are by Alice Wellington Rollins, A. Lampman, and Roberston Trowbridge. In the Monthly Gossip the Editor makes a good-natured reply to criticisms on his July talk to contributors, and in Book Talk he reviews Howells, Haggard, Sidney Luska, Miss Baylor and others.

SUIT TO PREVENT CROSSING.—Judge Deady last week made an order in the United States circuit court allowing R. Koehler, receiver of the O. & C. R. R., to commence suit against the Oregon Pacific Railroad Company to prevent them from crossing the main track of the O. & C. R. R. at Albany twice within a distance of 1400 feet, and to prevent them from tearing up and removing the switch of the O. & C. leading from the main track down Railroad street to the mills. The O. P. Co.'s track crosses the O. & C. Co's track on its way east near the station at Albany. The O. P. Co. desire to lay a track to the mills on the city front, and instead of branching off from their main line near the river wish to turn after having crossed the O. & C. Co's track, run parallel with it for some 1400 feet, then recross it and run down the same street on which the O. & C. Co's switch is laid, to the mills. This will necessitate the removal of the O. & C. Co's, switch to one side of the street, and the crossing and recrossing of the main line at the distance of 1400 feet it is claimed will be dangerous. The city council of Albany has granted the O. P. Co. permission to lay its track as above stated, and consequently Receiver Koehler will bring a suit to try and prevent the work being carried out to the detriment of the O. & C. railroad.—Oregonian.

THE NEW OREGON CODE.—Bancroft, Whitney & Co., law publishers, are now engaged in preparing for shipment the first volume of Hill's annotated laws of Oregon. A few copies of this volume have already reached Oregon, but most of them await shipment. The first volume contains 1052 pages, and is devoted to civil and criminal codes, and laws relating to practice in justices' courts. The second volume, which will be ready for delivery on the 9th inst., will consist of 895 pages. The pages in the two volumes run consecutively; therefore the total number of pages of the newly published laws of Oregon, as recorded, is 1947. The second volume contains miscellaneous laws of Oregon, the constitutional amendments to be submitted to the electors at the coming November special election, and acts of congress relating to title to land in Oregon. There is found, in the back of the second volume, an index to the constitution of the United States, and an index to all the matter contained in both volumes. These indexes make 112 pages. Excluding the Declaration of Independence, the constitution of the United States, the constitution of Oregon and the appendix in the second volume, the number of separate sections in both volumes is 4235.

IN 1870 the legislature authorized the school land board to loan the Baker city academy $10,000, and take a mortage on their land and buildings. The loan was made, but no interest nor even a part of the principal has been paid. The last legislature authorized the board to foreclose the mortage and sell the property to the Baker city school district at a price to be fixed by three appraisers. One to be appointed by the court of Baker county, one by the school district, and both to choose a third. The appraisers met and placed the value of the property at $300. Now the state board is "hot in the collar," and refuse to make a deed at the price named, and has been sustained by the courts in such proceeding.
