No less than 128 passenger trains representing II railroads arrive and depart from the local depots in Minneapolis. These trains if consolidated into one train, roughly estimated, would include 128 engines, 602 cars, 1285 trainmen, would measure a little over 11 miles, would weigh a trifle over 24,000 tons and could comfortably carry 47,920 passengers besides several shiploads of baggage. Of all these trains, without doubt, the best equipped and most popular trains are those via the Chicago & Northwestern line.
