FATHER'S CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

They Were Useful to the Family, and He Saw Little of Them.

We were talking about Christmas presents, the girls and mother and I, when father came in. Then we changed the subject just a little bit, because it was father's presents we were discassing. Father sat down by the stove and rubbed his hands—he had just been out at the barn-and a queer expression slowly settled upon his features.

"Say, mother, and Ned and girls," he said, "I don't want any of you to get me any presents. 'Tain't no use, you

'Why, father," said Lena in an aggrieved voice, "we always get you useful presents, don't we? I don't myself believe in things that are not useful." Father's eyes twinkled. "Yes," he said, "but I sometimes think they are a little too useful, you know." Nell shrugged her shoulders impa-

Then, Ned, do you remember the compass you got me for a birthday present last June? It was a nice little compass, and I guess a feller about your size thought so, tou for he's been usin of it ever sence, Then, let's see, there was the silk han'kerchief that mother give me at birthday, and I put it away choicelike, and the fust thing I knew Leny was a wearin of it inside her jacket. Yes, my presents are all useful, a leetle bit too useful, mebbe. See the point, don't you?" He wandered about for a long period and finally discovered a humble cottage. Here be took shelter for a time and fell in love with the occupant's lovely daughter. His identity was not suspected, and owing to his shabby appearance resulting from his long wandering he was regarded as an undesirable suitor and was summarily ejected. Broken hearted, he again resumed his apparently endless journey and at night slept under an oak tree. There a good fairy told him that a twig of mistletoe would reconcile the irate parent to the match, but it must be gathered from a hollow oak tree growing by the side of a stream opposite a peculiarly dwarfed weeping In the morning he was preparing to search for the tree, but found, to his delight, that it was evidently the one he had been sleeping under. Climbing to the topmost brauches, he found the mistletoe, tore it off and descended the tree in triumph. He found the cottage without difficulty, presented his peace offering and was promptly given the young HAY-FEVER IT WILL CURE. lady, with whom he returned to the palace, where he lived the remainder of his days in the usual legendary condition of bliss.
