It has been settled that Senator Hanna will ride with President McKinley in the inaugural parade. The decision is the result of a long controversy. The suggestion that Roosevelt should ride with him was turned down. Senator Hanna, as chairman of the joint congressional committee on inauguration, has the right of way. Congressman Cannon, a house member of the committee, may also ride with the President. The other members of the committee will ride with Vice-President Roosevelt.

It is now admitted by the treasury officials that the greater portion of the taxes imposed nominally to meet expenses of the war with Spain, but really to make up the deficit that would have existed long before now on account of the prohibitive nature of many sections of the Dingley tariff act, will be permanent, because of the increasing public expenditures and the decreasing income from custom duties. Some prominent Republicans are openly advocating the lowering of tariff duties to increase the revenue, but the rock-ribbed high protectionists, of whom Mr. McKinley is one of the chief high priests, will not consent to that as long as they have the power to prevent it. So the people can make up their minds to pay the war taxes not cut by the bill before the senate for at least four years more.

We wonder how long the people will submit to senatorial deadlocks? It is strange that party factions will be allowed to dominate legislation and pile up heavy burdens on the people. The Oregon legislature, while overwhelmingly Republican, cannot agree to elect a senator. This is sure to be the result as long as the people place a party so securely in power that they do not fear being put out, and it is as sure that those who control the party will use its power for self-interest, ignoring any rights the people may have who placed them there. This is the case at Salem, with two factions of the Republicans under two leaderships, there are more candidates for office than can be served. The only way out of these conditions is for the people of the state to become a little more independent in their voting, and by the selecting of the men of that body, even-up its membership as to politics. Don't allow three or four men to run the whole concern.

The McKinley administration has taken great credit for the management of the Chinese question, and yet nothing has been settled. In fact, the outlook for a favorable settlement is far from concluded. The question of indemnity is the rock that may wreck the concert of action of the powers interested and a grab for territory or "spheres of influence," as security for their respective claims, may close the door of China, as far as the United States is concerned. The only country, so far, that has achieved any success with the Chinese puzzle, is Russia, and she has appropriated the northern half of the empire without the aid or consent of any other nation. Of course, we will find the door open very wide in Manchuria, except for those things that Russia herself produces. No, the Chinese difficulty is not yet settled, and if the McKinley-Hay diplomacy is not more successful in this case than in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, we shall not have much to show for the men and treasure expended.

MUCH credit is due the vigorous opposition by the Democratic and Fusion senators, led by Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, which has set free certain party captives, heretofore bound fast to Mr. Hanna's organization, and led them to confess the stupendous expenditures and extravagant outlay of public money to which the Republican administration is already committed, and in the face of which these experienced politicians, with some show of conscience and fear of public condemnation, evidently hesitate to further and sustain the plan to loot the treasury, which lies in the ship subsidy bill. The honest and courageous opposition to the subsidy bill alone made it possible for a revival of sanity to take place among the Republican senators. One of the most remarkable confessions brought about by the Democratic side of the house was from Senator Allison, who is chairman of the committee on appropriations, making the statement that the probable amount of the appropriations for the current fiscal year as contemplated by the bills now before the senate, those in committee and those having already passed the senate, will be between thirty and forty million dollars more than they were last year.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

APPROPRIATION BILLS will be a prominent feature in the record of the legislature.

THE talk of an extra session of the legislature, it is said, is not seriously considered by Gov. Geer.

THE senatorial deadlock at Salem has not been broken as yet. It begins to look like it would either be J. H. Mitchell or nobody—probably nobody.

AMBASSADOR CHOATE has received instructions from Washington to impress upon the British government the necessity for immediate action upon the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Great Britain will be given to understand that a reply to the Senate amendments is expected by March 4th; so says a dispatch dated at New York Feb. 19th.

As a result of Mrs. Nation's example as an out-law, Mrs. Rose Hudson, wife of John Hudson, a saloon-keeper at Millwood, Kas., was shot and instantly killed by a mob who were raiding her husband's saloon. Five men have been arrested for the crime. Why not arrest Mrs. Nation as an accomplice in this foul murder? Or do the people of Kansas enjoy her rule.

It is said that President McKinley's trip to this coast in May will be abandoned, on account of the certainty of extra session of Congress on the Cuban question and other unfinished business. As the next Congress is more strongly Republican than the present, it should not take them long to finish appropriating the balance of Uncle Sam's treasury, and then give the President ample time to make his intended trip.

VICE-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is annoyed and sometimes makes the "air a little blue" when reading the stories told by irresponsible newspaper correspondents as to his prowess as a hunter. Of course no one who has seen the North American cougar believed the stories about the vice-president attacking the animal with a knife. A ten-pound tomcat at bay would not be a pleasant sight even for a man armed with a knife; but a hundred and fifty-pound cat would be positively disconcerting.

Our Nation Has Distanced History.

The New York Saturday Evening Post declares that the mere figures of the growth of this country absolutely stagger the understanding of the average citizen. In one hundred years, while the population of the world has doubled, the population of the United States has increased fourteen fold. The wealth has increased fifty fold.

In 1800 the largest fortune in the United States was $250,000. Today there are several fortunes of over $200,000,000. In 1800 the settled area consisted of 305,708 square miles, today it is over 200,000 square miles. The center of population has moved from a position east of Baltimore to a point well within Indiana.

Only four per cent. of the people lived in the cities one hundred years ago. Today the proportion is over thirty out of every hundred population.

Our agriculture, which amounted to a hundred millions a year a hundred years ago, is rapidly approaching $3,000,000,000 a year, and the value of the farms of the country is nearly $15,000,000,000.

We have forty branches of manufacture which each turn out, annually, more than $50,000,000 worth of products, and of the forty, five turn out over $500,000,000 each.

Our metallic productions are approaching the $300,000,000 mark, and the other mineral products are nearly $400,000,000 per year.

Our foreign commerce of exports and imports has a total of almost $2,000,000,000 annually. In our banks of all kinds there is a capital something like $8,000,000,000. Thus the story goes—a record of millions becoming billions and a story of increase beyond romance.

And beyond the government itself! In 1800 the packet sloop carried from Philadelphia to Washington all the furniture of the United States government, together with all the Federal archives, which filled "seven large boxes and four of five smaller ones." As a contrast see the thousands of buildings the government owns today. In only one of them there has been no great change. This is the White House. But, deficient as it is in some respects, it still has attractions as a place of residence.

From The Commoner.

The ammunition makers seem to be the residuary legatees of the modern methods of civilization.

Justice is the last thing Neeley and Rathbone should ask for; but it should be the first thing they get.

Mr. Hanna objects to having it called "the subsidy bill." Doubtless he would also enter objection to the title of "steal."

After reading Senator Towne's speech one can easily understand why the Administration supporters were in such a hurry to have his successor sworn in.

If we have peace in the Philippine Islands why is it necessary to continue the press censorship? And if press censorship is still necessary, why not admit that war is in progress?

A large number of congressmen who excuse their conduct on the ground that they are filled with missionary zeal are filled only with commissionary zeal.

He Fooled the Surgeons.

All doctors told Renick Hamilton of West Jefferson, O., after suffering 18 months from Rectal Fistula, he would die, unless a costly operation was performed; but he cured himself with five boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the surest cure on earth, and the best salve in the world. 25 cents a box. Sold by City Drug Store.

France is paying off her national debt. In the last eleven years the expenditures of Great Britain have increased 38 per cent., while in France the increase has been only five per cent. In five years France will reduce her debt by 500,000,000 francs. Good for France! When a country makes progress toward getting out of debt there is hope in abundance for her.

The use of oysters has been discouraged on the ground that they were dangerous mediums of conveying disease, especially germs of typhoid fever. Now physicians are said to have forbidden another relish nearly as popular. Celery is under the ban, as they say it is equally well adapted to transmitting the poisonous element of the soil and carrying the germs of typhoid.

A powerful engine cannot be run with a weak boiler, and we can't keep up the strain of an active life with a weak stomach; neither can we stop the human machine to make repairs. If the stomach cannot digest enough food to keep the body strong, such a preparation as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure should be used. It digests what you eat, and it simply can't help but do you good. City Drug Store and Dr. J. Hinkle, Central Point.

The railroads are fast becoming the property of a few men. As they pass into the hands of the few, stronger will become the demand for government ownership. The people of this country cannot be imposed upon with impunity for any length of time. Let the arm of taxation be raised to strike down monopoly. It is equal to every requirement. The people will discover it some day and when they do industry and enterprise will be relieved of the burden of government and monopoly and privilege will carry it.

As to the reason for the fact that bacon now costs more than any meat in the market, wholesale dealers supply an explanation. The increased cost is due to the fact that the various governments that now have large armies in the field, take all of that sort of meat the packers have in the way of surplus. They also absorb much of the regular supply. So the price is kept away beyond what it usually is. Bacon is the staple food of the soldier in the field. Packers have standing orders for all they can spare.

An exchange says: A legislature that would pass a law providing that A should not shave B on Sunday, because, forsooth, C did not want to shave B on that day is a hundred years behind the epoch in which they live and every member voting therefor ought to be presented with a copy of the Blue Laws of Connecticut, bound in buckskin and tied with a tow string, by their constituents, on their return, with a request that this mark of distinction be permitted to pass down the line of posterity from its illustrious owner.

It has again been discovered that "every blonde girl displays the evidence of disease in her blondness as the pitted face reveals the evidence of small-pox." The original alarmist in this matter was Sir Benjamin Richardson, who wrote about it in England half a century ago and established a theme for subsequent essayists. The latest alarmist is Col. J. B. Barry of Chicago, who says: "If a girl has hair as dark as a raven's wing and eyes like the limpid moon-light lake she is indeed blessed. But if her locks fall in a mass of shining gold, resembling a dancing sunbeam on a dainty buttercup, she must don sackcloth and cover herself with ashes. There will be no more blonds, either real or chemical, for the day of the dark rose is here." If the theory is correct and the day of the blond is really passing, like the swan, whose death song is its sweetest one, she is growing prettier as she goes and has her share of the world's admiration in her last days of earthly existence.

The state camp of the Modern Woodmen of America have elected the four following delegates to the head camp of the order, which meets at St. Paul in June: Oswald West of Salem, M. A. Miller of Lebanon, S. A. Hulm of La Grande and J. W. Simmons, delegate-at-large. The following officers of the state camp were elected: State Venerable Consul, G. C. Burckhart, Albany; banker, H. Boivin, Ashland; clerk, R. McMurphy, Eugene; escort, C. W. Meadows, Portland; watchman, L. E. Renton, Astoria. The next meeting of the state camp will be held at The Dalles.

A number of Americans who were prospecting for quicksilver in the Chicos mountains near the Rio Grande discovered a large cave in which they found the skeletons of twenty-six men lying side by side. Several copper and stone cooking dishes, together with rude mining tools, were found, and on the side of one of the dishes was the name "Narvaez" and the figures "1528." It is thought that the skeletons are those of the famous Narvaez expedition which was shipwrecked near Galveston in 1535. Narvaez and many of his followers perished there. The remainder started westward and four of them reached California.

There never was a time when the air was so full of solid railroad building talk for Oregon as it is at present, says the Eugene Guard. Already three roads are projected into the Nehalem country, extensions are mapped out at various points in eastern and southeastern Oregon. The report is that the Coos Bay & Eastern will be completed to Roseburg and that early spring will see the Corvallis & Eastern railroad going over the mountains at a lively rate and across the plains to an eastern connection. All this is to be accomplished to a great extent by capital coming in from other states, capital that has faith in Oregon's future and feels safe in casting itself with us.

In the house of commons on Feb. 19th, Mr. MacLeod favored the imposition of a retaliatory tariff against the United States. Mr. MacLeod argued that Canada should follow the example set by Russia, and have a sliding scale tariff which would favor friends and be directed against the ones who were not friendly. He said that Canada was the best outside customer the United States had, and so long as Canada was foolish enough to go on as we are doing at present, Canada would never get fair treatment from the United States. Canada should touch the human pocket through the tariff. This is a little presumptuous, but Uncle Sam won't pay much attention to it.

This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. Poor Old Spain.

Spain, once the greatest nation in the world, seems to be going down gradually, following the footsteps of other ancient countries bordering on the Mediterranean. The disturbances are not, it is said by persons familiar with the situation, of either Carlist or Republican origin, although both parties are no doubt active in trying to take advantage of the trouble. It is declared that the uprising is in reality an outbreak of the discontented. Those taking part in it comprise all classes of malcontents, and its causes are like those which brought about the French revolution.

As one diplomat put it: "Spain is suffering from a complication of diseases." Poverty has been increasing, the burden of taxation has been growing heavier, and the laboring classes are ripe for revolution. At the same time the ruling dynasty is unpopular. All these complications and a number of others have brought about a wide-spread feeling of unrest, and great events are looked for in Spain unless the situation is quickly changed.

Spain has been tending toward rebellion for some time. Even in the life-time of King Alfonso XII there were continual disturbances, and in the closing year of his reign there were labor riots of such seriousness that it was reported that the rioters had poisoned the "Inca" in many places. The Queen Regent has always been unpopular, and during the Spanish-American war she received the significant nickname of "the Austrian woman," the same epithet which was applied to Marie Antoinette. Only a short time ago an attempt was made to assassinate her. Had she been successful, the situation in the lifetime of Alfonso XII and later, the impoverishment resulting from the war with America had made the situation immeasurably worse, and has driven the laboring classes to desperation.

Wier, the Cuban tyrant, is the military chief in control, and has not only proclaimed martial law in Madrid, but has posted his troops in such a manner as to command every part of the city. The downfall of the ministry is said to be certain, and that of the government possible. The reason given by Wier for his action is the inability of the civil government of the province of Madrid to maintain order.

Nevertheless, there is a suspicion that this proceeding may be a coup d'etat. Wier's troops are acting exactly like a General who was preparing for the role of the "Inca" on horseback. He has been making speeches and giving out statements, the effect of which would be to show that he was only a man, and could bring Spain through her troubles. He is, however, the Captain General, and as such he has the power to enforce martial law in Madrid when it is declared.—Yonks Journal.

What Shall be Done with Prunes?

"The prune growers can do one of four things. They can borrow money to pay the cost of putting the sale of prunes, or they can advance it themselves, or they can fritter away valuable time waiting for it to come in, or they can sell their prunes at cut rates and ruin the market for several years to come, or they can do nothing at all, which would have about the same effect."

A car of prunes sold to consumers is out of the market. A car sold to the trade is still in the market. If every prune in the association warehouses was moved out upon the jobbers at cut prices they would lose the market as a bear on prices for next year. If the association is to maintain prices next year it must get this year's stock into the hands of consumers and at a profit.

The above are editorial paragraphs from the San Jose, Calif., Mercury of Feb. 12, says the San Jose Statesman, which add: "A serious situation confronts the California growers in the combine and this situation applies indifferently to the growers of Oregon, and those of Washington and Idaho also. An article in the Pacific Homestead of this week shows that the total crop last year was 180,000,000 pounds, and that the California combine is holding over 90,000,000 pounds, with the prospect of a carry-over of 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 pounds, this large stock of prunes, which is held in the hands of the combine, is a big pile; but they would all be bought and eaten before the next year if the majority of the prunes of this country could be consigned to the prunes are good for them, and just what they need; and the demand for future crops would be secured. As a business proposition, it looks like a good one, even though it might cost the producers of the sales of the 90,000,000 pounds to do the advertising and introducing. We shall watch the proceedings with expectancy."

THE WAR IN CHINA.

PEKIN, Feb. 17.—Count von Waldersee has written to the Generals under his supervision notifying them to have all their available troops ready in two weeks for an expedition lasting eight days. In communicating his letter to Gen. Chaffee, Count von Waldersee says: "Owing to the unsatisfactory nature of the negotiations for peace, and also to circumstances rendering such a course desirable, it will probably be necessary to resume military operations on a large scale, especially toward the west." The destination of the proposed expedition is Sianfu. The foreign troops have for their object to be to compel the Chinese to accept terms of the powers.

The military men much elated at the prospect of active service. Many believe the Chinese army will strive to the utmost to protect the province of Szechuan against invasion. It is not thought likely that Gen. Chaffee will agree to the plan, and has since received positive instructions from Washington to have nothing to do with the proposed expedition.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 19.—A special dispatch from Peking says Field Marshal Count von Waldersee's expedition to Sianfu will comprise 15,000 British, German, Italian and French. It is understood that if the expedition starts it will act as a guard of honor of the Emperor on his way back to Peking. It is rumored that the allies will simultaneously operate in the Yangtze-Kiang valley.

PEKIN, Feb. 19.—The foreign envoys have given the Chinese authorities eight days to issue satisfactory edicts.

PEKIN, Feb. 19.—Hansa agency dispatch from Peking says Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching have informed the legations that the court agrees to inflict the punishment demanded.
