A Scoundrel at Large.

The object of Sheriff Orme's visit to Arizona was to arrest Francis Fitch, who formerly practiced his vocation as an all-around crook and incidentally labored in the legal profes-sion in this section. His thieving schemes have been numerous and of a varied character, and it has been a wonder how he escaped the peniten-tiary, where he unquestionably belongs, for so many years. One of Ed. Day, who is in the employ of the Rogue River Lumber and Minning Co., arrived in Jacksonville a few sum of size of the Rogue River Lumber and Minning Co., arrived in Jacksonville a few sum of size of Medford and entrusted to him. District Attorney Reames lodged an information against Fitch, and armed with the necessary requisition papers the sheriff started to bring him back. Finding that the atmosphere was becoming too tropical for him here Fitch had left Oregon last January, and eventually settled at Tuscon, A. T. The reputation of his father, Thos. Fitch, the silver-tongued orator, had preceded him, and assisted by that he soon secured considerable business. But his crooked traits soon began to assert themselves, causing him to leave there between two suns, too. When Sheriff Orme reached that city he found that his bird had flown nearly a fortnight before, presumably for Colorado. Indictments have been found against him in his late field of operations, and the probabilities are that Fitch will soon be be-hind the bars; at least we hope so.
