SALEM MURDERERS TRACKED.

SALEM, Ore., June II-Tracey and Merrill, the escaped convicts and murderers, were at Gervais last night and secured supper at a wood-choppers' camp at the point of their guns. Leaving the camp they held up two deputy sheriffs, who were in a buggy looking for them. They took the men's guns at Salem less paralytic, who had lost even the and told them to get out; that they feit tired and guessed they would rest

Afterwards they abandoned the buggy and took to the woods again. now he can see, talk, walk and work. Bloodhounds which were brought from Walla Walla and put on the track of the murderers took up the scent at the wood-choppers' camp and tracked them to the timber two miles from Gervais. The timber was surrounded, and once some of the members of the posse in pursuit caught a glance of D. C., recently.

At 11 o'clock a report was received from Aurora stating that the convicts passed through that town on wheels, heading for Boon's Ferry. They eluded the vigilance of the pursuers in the dark.

The convicts got away from Salem by stealing a couple of horses almost from the heart of the town. An ex-convict has been arrested upou suspicion of having furnished smuggled arms to the murderders.

When the men appeared at the wood-choppers camp they seemed tired and almost worn out. They forced the cook to supply them with a good tween two cars near Merlin, supper, and ate their supper in sight of the men with their rifles handy. They told the men to behave and no one would be hurt. They exchanged The Commoner, the leading Demojokes and said that they were having a "regular summer outing." I mentioned it to my doctor and he not only gave his consent to my trying Dr. Williams' Pink death at the hands of the robbers. It is evidently the intention of the men to make some point where they can secrete themselves on a train, or else get able to move and so broken down and hopeless that life was a burden, I can now walk, do any odd jobs about the place, go down town, and—most wonderful of all—can see. And I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pill.
