Idaho's Big Grizzly Ends Bloody Career Site of Ancient Colony to Be Marked

Big Foot, the gray terror of the Idaho hills, is dead at last. The giant grizzly closed his career with an orgy that included the killing of about thirty horses in one week, and the ranchers throughout the wide region where he operated are rejoicing that he will not rob them any more.

When Tom Hopper, the veteran hunter of Spokane, arrived in Lewiston with a party of amateurs and announced that they were going after Big Foot, the natives, on Tom's account, reckoned there'd be "somethin doin'."

As nearly as they could find out, Big Foot was forty miles from Lewiston in an untravel-

Big Foot was so surprised by to run. The dogs kept at his heels, and the race continued until the bunters were far behind and cursing their luck that their magnificent quarry was out of range. But Big Foot changed his route. But Big Foot changed his route.

Making a detour of the top of a ridge, he raced at top speed down the other side, noting little of what was ahead of him.

Right below him was the camp, and Right Ri

Holbrook and another member of the party were there. Holbrook saw the great brute coming like a cyclone, and, grabbing his Winchester, he fired.

It was a lucky shot. The grizzly rolled over dead with a bullet in his heart. Fifteen dead horses were found within two miles of the point where the bear had made his den.

Through Sleeping and Dining: Cars and busy mothers. "In buying the stockmending process for the stockings of children that will be useful to many ings for my family of little boys and girls," she says, "I select those very long in the leg. When the inevitable gaping hole appears on the knee, I simply cut the stocking in two at that point and stitch a seam around the knee on the sewing machine, shorten ing the stocking of course, but elimirating the hole in a way that makes the result almost equal to a new stocking. It takes me three minutes."

The same woman does not discard a pair of gloves which she finds on attempting to wear are too large for her, but takes a seam through the palm of the hand, between the opening, where they fasten, and the outside seam. It is rare, according to her, that a little gore taken at this point does not give the glove an excellent fit, without doing any serious injury to its appear ance.-New York Post.

by a Monument. The laying of a cornerstone for the Gosnold memorial on May 24 at Cuttyhunk, Mass., marks the begitning of work on a shaft which is to commemorate a hitherto neglected spot which is rich in historic tradition.

On the 24th day of May, 1602, Barthelomew Gosnold, with thirty-two companions, landed on Cuttyhunk island. They built a fort and storehouse and engaged in barter with the Indians. This storehouse is believed to be the first habitation built on the coast by Europeans.

The memorial shaft is to be built of rough field bowlders from the rocky hills of the island. It will rise sixty the sudden at. feet from the base and will be a landtack of the dogs | mark for vessels passing through Buzthat he started zards bay and Vineyard sound.
