SENATOR FULTON has gone to Washington, in re-ponse to a telegram from Senator Mitchell desiring his immediate presence. What this means has been arousing great comment here and there seems to be litt'e doubt in the minds of many that the statement that Mr. Mitchell was seriously ill is so far confirmed by this ci cumstance as to lend to it more than a color of probability.

Mr. Roosevelt ought to and appoint to this im portant position a man who would have considerable political influence in one of the daubtful states.

THE dispute in regard to the actual boundary between Alaska and the British possessions arises from a redundancy of definition in the trenty negotiated by Great Britain and Russit in 1826. Not content with defining the treaty, at three marine, leagues from tide water, the framers of the convention added certain physical features of the location of the boundary which subsequent investigations have proven non-existent. While, in the mind of the authorities in this country, there is no question that the intention of the "segotiators was to place the boundary at three marine leagues frem tide water, the interposition of these details has complicated the issue and at least made an argument on which Great Britain bangs her claim.
