He will henceforth be known as the pioneer in extreme northern lands, the one who went beyond Ultima Thule, as the ancients called the northernmost inhabitable portions

The Duke of the Abruzzi holds the record for approaching nearest the pole. He reached latitude 86 degrees 83 minutes north. This was an item in the assorted news of the world which was sent to Peary by the Windward on its voyage to bring him home. Peary's point in latitude 84 degrees 17 minutes is still this side of Nansen's "farthest north," which was 86 degrees 14 minutes. It had been expected that if Peary reached the eighty-fourth or eighty-fifth parallel that he would surely accomplish another five degrees

The record of the search for the pole is a record of suffering and death. It has been going on with longer or shorter interruptions for 650 years. In some generations it has been absolutely ignored, while in others the desire to discover the pole and learn its secrets has amounted to a public pas-

The number of deaths, however, has been comparatively small, amounting to fewer than 1,000. Every man of them, however, was a picked man and a hero. Their graves are scattered all along the cold trail. Some have been despoiled by huge burgomaster gulls, while others remain inviolate as when left by saddened comrades of the dead. On Cape Sabine is the solitary grave of Professor August Sonntag, the astronomer, genius of the Hays expedition of 1860. Two bones and the skull, whitened by long exposure, are all that remain of this hero.

On Littleton island, not far from the grave of Professor Sonntag, is that of Christian Ohlsen, who was buried here by Dr. Kane's expedition in 1853. Two other members of Kane's expedition died while the Advance was wintered at Fern rock. They lie buried in the little observatory there.

On the west side of Smith sound, at Baird inlet, George W. Rice of the Lady Franklin bay expedition is buried in the ice. Five sailors of the Sir John Franklin expedition are also burled in the ice on Cape Sabine. The grave of Captain Charles Francis Hall is marked with a brass tablet. It is near Thank God harbor, where he dled Nov. 8, 1871. Wherever arctic expeditions have been they have left in their trails iso-lated graves of comrades who have died of exposure or have been killed by falling over icy cliffs.

Mothers Make It the Home Medicine For the Little Ones.

The children, God bless them, are the buds and flowers of our homes. Without their prattle and hearty laughter, our homes would be desolate. They should ever be carefully tended in childhood and youth, if we expect them to ripen into perfect men and women. In the home and at school, the children have their times of ill health and suffering. We often note the pallid and bloodless cheeks, ings of limbs and muscles. They complain of headache, drowsiness, weariness, dyspepsia, and indigestion. All such symptoms and ailments mean that the seeds of disease will have a fast and firm hold, unless proper measures are taken to restore a perfect condition of
