WHILE in Paris Wm. J. Bryan ventured the prediction that Roosevelt would be nominated next year and defeated. He said before the election next fall matters of a serious financial nature will arise which will result in Mr. Roosevelt's downfall.

THE good-roads movement will grow until substantial results are realized in the way of systematic road building, because its importance demands it. When people realize the expensiveness of bad roads, they will demand the Cheapest roads, which are good, hard roads that can be used with facility every day in the year. Bad roads are a heavy tax on the people who use them, and the tax falls most heavily upon the farmers and producers. Good roads, once paid for, are a perpetual saving to travel and transportation.

OREGON is a great "apple" state, but there are others. On December 1, 1903, there were seven states in each of which more than 100,000 barrels of ap ples were in cold storage. New York headed the list with 967,000 barrels; Illinois was second with 564,000 barrels; Missouri had 527,000 barrels; Pennsylvania had 220,000; Ohio 135,800; Massachusetts 118,000 and Indiana 107,500. Besides the apples in cold storage in each of otherstates, many hundred thousand barrels of the fruit were in common storage.

In an elequent address, delivered or the eve of the recent New York munic lpal election, W. Bourke Cockran said some things that should be read by the voters of the entire country. Follow ing are excerpts from the address:

Everybody can remember the conditions that existed ten years ago; some of us can recall the panic of 1873both were alike in the suddenness with which they came and the disastrous results which they produced. Here Providence was smiling upon us in a good harvest, when there was no diminution in the yield of the earth. When every condition of prosperity was ours a panic appeared like a dark cloud in the that city whom he has tried in vain sky. It settled down over the length and breadth of the country, wrapping in its sinister folds countless thousands questions the honesty of purpose of of American homes and sending the divided about $6,000,000 among his fol here before returning home.

Sept. 1, but varying, of course, with the time of planting. The Queen of the Market, in various colors, is the standard early variety, together with the similar Queen of Spring, Queen of the Earlies, etc. The recently introduced Tom Thumb Comet or Poodle is also worthy. Of the midseason the Victoria, Peony Flowered Perfection and Giant Comet are best known, but by no means include all the best kinds. The new California Branching Comet is especially striking, and many others might be mentioned. Of the late varieties Semple Branching stands preeminent as one of the finest of asters, especially for commercial purposes.—R.
