WHY CREAM TESTS VARY.

Professor Farrington Answers 1 Question Which Is Often Asked. In answer to a correspondent as to the cause of so much variation in the tests of cream, Professor E. H. Farringas follows:

by a cream sept after or from the gases formed when eam sours. On account of these gases a pipette full of such cream will hold a certain amount thicker than milk that more or less of it adheres to the inside walls of the pipette when it is emptied. The giass does not drain so thoroughly as when milk is measured, and there is left considerable fat in this cream adhering to the walls of the pipette. This adhering cream is not of uniform quantity. More of it may be left in the pipette from some creams than from others. The amount which sticks to the pipette depends a great deal on the richness and ripeness of the cream measured. Cream bottles and pipettes may not be accurately graduated. One person may test cream by measuring into the cream test bottle with a 17.6 c. c. pipette, and another may test by weighing the cream after it is measured into the test bottle. There is a difference in the tests made by weight and by measuring the cream.
