THE Government of the . United States enjoys throughout the world the somewhat expensive reputation of being both rich and "easy." If there was any doubt as to its right to this reputation it must have been dispelled by the Parama transaction. We found a quarter of million people tied to a malarial and worthless neck of land. The only hope of prosperity for those people was to dig several million cubic yards of that land away at a cost of about $150,000.000. Nobody could do that work but the rich and benevolent uncle at Washington.
